City Executive Committee:
Complete returns not in at 3 o'clock this morning. Several precincts will complete counting Thursday.

Charles L. Chosewood, the only candidate openly endorsed by women voters, received an overwhelming vote over James E. Belcher for alderman from the third ward in yesterday's municipal democratic primary, the first in which the women of the city have been given the right to cast their ballot.

The winners in the councilmanic contests in which the women indicated no decisive pre-election choices were as follows:

First ward, T. A. Conger; third C. Baggs;aryhonApriimetaoetaoetaoi ward, F. C. Woodall; fifth ward, Dr. J. B. Golden; sixth ward, A. L. Richards, seventh ward, C. C. Baggs; ninth ward, Robert H. Jones, Jr.: tenth ward, T. Frank Calloway, and eleventh ward, J. H. Olson.

Owing to the extreme length of the ballot caused by the large number of candidates for the city executive committee and by the additional votes occasioned by the participation of the women in the primary, the clerks at many of the precincts found it impossible to complete the count on the executive committee vote, while others were still working at 3 o'clock Thursday morning in an endeavor to complete this work. In one ward the managers quit work for the night and will complete the count today.

BUCHANAN DEFEATED.

Incomplete returns on the executive committee race, however, while showing the defeat of E. C. Buchanan, chairman of the body which gave the women the right to vote, indicate that other members of the old committee have been elected and failed to bear out the pre-election prediction that the women as a whole, because of differences with the city executive committee over the disposition of the women's primary fees, would vote solidly against the old committee members. In fact, the results in many precincts show that many of the old committeemen received a large majority of the ballots cast by the women.

Mr. Buchanan was defeated in the first ward, second ward, precinct B; third ward, precinct A; fourth and fifth wards; sixth ward, precinct B; seventh ward, precinct B, and the eleventh ward, precinct A; and carried the ninth ward, precinct A, and eleventh ward, precinct B.

Out of a total registration of 17,945, the aldermanic race showed a total vote cast of approximately 6,650. Nearly all of the 3,975 women who registered took advantage of their first opportunity to vote by casting a ballot in Wednesday's primary, demonstrating their appreciation of suffrage by voting a

$500,000 BUILDING PLANNED TO HONOR GEORGIANS IN WAR

Beautiful Structure to House Records of Georgia's Heroes Decided Upon by Memorial Commission.

CAMPAIGN FOR FUNDS TO START NOVEMBER 11

Big Meeting in Atlanta, at Which President Wilson May Speak, Will Inaugurate Movement.

That the people of Georgia be asked to give a minimum of $500,000 to erect the state memorial to her soldiers and sailors of the great war was decided at a meeting of the Georgia Memorial association held yesterday morning in the library of the state capitol.

The chairman, Judge Andrew Cobb, of Athens, presided, and among the members of the commission taking part in the discussion were Judge Samuel Sibley, of Union Point; W. H. Fleming, of Augusta; Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, of Atlanta; W. A. Charters, of Gainesville; Mrs. Linton C. Hopkins, of Atlanta; Mrs. R. C. Neely, of Waynesboro, and Mrs. A. R. Lawton ,of Savannah.

That the memorial should take the form of a memorial-historical building, to be erected in or near the capital city of the state, was also the unanimous vote of the meeting. Mrs. Lawton offering the resolution and Judge Sibley proposing the minimum fund adequate to a suitable tribute which should commemorate, in the words of Judge Cobb, "the services of Georgia's soldiers and sailors, and to memorialize her dead."

Armistice Day Observance.

On motion of Mrs. Inman, the commission adopted also a suggestion of Governor Dorsey that the movement for the fund be launched immediately following a great memorial meeting to be held on armistice day, November 11, at the Atlanta Auditorium.

Tentative plans for this meeting already suggested include the bringing of a speaker of national renown, with a possibility of the presence of President Wilson, to make the occasion as important as its purpose—a fitting expression of honor to the heroic dead.

The commission meeting was an enthusiastic and harmonious one. A number of those present had come prepared to make suggestions for a monument, pure and simple; others for a memorial which should be entirely utilitarian.

"A beautiful monument, I cannot call useless," said Judge Sibley, who at first advocated that the memorial should take the monument form. "Nothing is useless which recalls sacrifice and makes for ideals. The Cross is in itself a useless thing, but as a symbol, see what it does and has done."

Beautiful Building.

The memorial building, which should be the most beautiful that could be devised, and which should at the same time include an auditorium for historical and memorial meetings, should harbor the records of the war and of Georgia's soldiers and sailors and Georgia history, and provide a meeting place for the veterans of the war, was finally, after interesting interchange of views, decided upon as the most judicious, the most inclusive form, and the one in which could be best embodied the wishes of the people of the state.

The chairman was instructed to ask the executive committee at once to appoint a general chairman for the raising of the fund and to work out all details, in order that the state-wide movement may be launched without delay.

On motion of Mr. Fleming, a resolution was passed that the memorial commission, in raising the memorial fund, earnestly request the active assistance of all county officials, organizations and newspapers.

In the afternoon the executive board was called together and proceeded about the work of putting into immediate effect the recommendations of the commission.

tI is proposed to raise the subscription according to counties, with a minimum quota for each county, and a complete and thorough canvass of every community, in order that the memorial may be truly representative of the sentiment and appreciation of the whole state.

NO RETALIATION BY UNITED STATES FOR MEXIC ATTACK

Admitted That Carranza Soldiers Fired on U. S. Airplane, But Is Claimed the Plane Was on the Mexican Side.

NO ISSUE TO BE MADE BY THE UNITED STATES

Flight of American Airplane Over Foreign Territory Held to Be Analogous to Invasion of Such Territory.

Laredo, Texas, September 3.—Possibility of any immediate retaliatory action by United States military forces in connection with the attack yesterday on an American army airplane has been eliminated, it was indicated here tonight by the admission of Mexican authorities today that the attack was made by Carranza soldiers.

While official information was lacking, the impression was gained in army circles that this admission has removed the situation from the hands of the military, so far as emergency action is concerned, and placed it directly up to Washington for diplomatic action.

Mexican Consul Garcia, in announcing that Mexican soldiers, on their own initiative, had fired upon the airplane, said a complete report had been made to Mexico City, with a request for instructions as to punishment for those guilty.

One Point in Difference.

One point in difference tonight between Mexican and American reports was the location of the airplane when the attackers fired the opening volley into it. Consul Garcia declared an investigation showed it was one kilometer inside the Mexican border, while unofficial American reports insist the plane was in United States territory at the time.

The exact nature of the report made by Colonel Beaumont B. Buck, district commander, to Major General J. T. Dickman, southern department commander at San Antonio, was not generally known today, as the former refused to make any statement. It is assumed he has forwarded the testimony of American witnesses to the attack, who declare emphatically the plane was near the Texas bank of the Rio Grande.

The Mexicans fired at the aviators, Consul Garcia said, merely to cause them to fly higher, as their airplane was frightening their cavalry horses, grazing nearby. The consul said they did not intend to hit the aviators or their plane.

Dry Agents Drank Whiskey of Men Whom They Shot

After Shackelford and Hudson Were Mortally Wounded, Their Liquor Was Guzzled by Virginia Prohi Sleuths, Witness Swears.

Manassas, Va., September 3.—Testimony that W. C. Hall, prohibition inspector, and three other "dry" agents, drank a part of the contraband whisky they had seized from R. C. Shackelford and Lawrence W. Hudson, whom them had mortally wounded, was presented today by Herman Goode, state's witness. The evidence marked the close of the second day of presentation of the prosecution's case in the trial of Hall, who is charged with implication in the killing of the alleged "bootleggers" near Winchester on March 26.

Goode declared that from his home he had a clear view of the Shenandoah Valley turnpike, where the shooting occurred, and that after the "dry" agents had returned from the Winchester hospital, where they had taken the dying Hudson, they took a bottle of whisky from the seized automobile and each took a drink. He also named Harry F. Sweet, who is unded indictment in connection with the killing, as being one of the group.

PRIMARY MAY END IN COURT APPEAL

Friends of Candidates Threaten to Seek Injunction, on Account of Women's Votes, in the Event of Defeat.

Threats were made at one or two of the polling places Tuesday by friends of candidates in the race that an injunction would be brought against the election managers, on the ground that the women had no legal right to vote, in the event that their advocates were defeated.

This statement was made by the campaign manager of one of the candidates at precinct A of the eighth ward, and it was rumored at the B precinct of the ninth ward that it would be no surprise if some of the candidates left out by the women's vote would bring this action.

There were divers opinions on what the result of such court controversy would be. While some men said that there was a possibility that the election might be declared illegal and put aside, they agreed that the men who started proceedings would injure their own interests above anything else.

One lawyer, in close touch with city politics, said that an effort to bring an injunction would be fruitless, as the courts would not make a decision any more than they did last year when there was a contest between two executive committees.

The primary election involved a contract, he said, in which all candidates joined with the full knowledge of the women's participation. He thought they could not now retire from the contract, because of defeat.

HE LEAVES CAPITAL ON SPEAKING TOUR TO COVER COUNTRY

President Will Tell What Happened at Versailles and Urge That Treaty Be Ratified Without Amendment.

WILSON IS CONFIDENT HE WILL WIN THE FIGHT

Before Leaving, President Expressed Himself as Satisfied With Outlook, Though Foes of Treaty Are Preparing Amendments and Reservations. Wilson to Speak in Thirty Cities.

Washington, September 3.—President Wilson left Washington tonight for a country-wide speaking trip to tell the American people first-hand of his part in the peace negotiations and to make a personal appeal that the peace treaty be ratified without amendment.

The president's special train, on which he will live nearly all of the time for the next twenty-five days, departed at 7 o'clock. The first leg of the trip of nearly ten thousand miles will be completed tomorrow morning in Columbus, Ohio, where he will make the first of his thirty scheduled addresses.

Given Ovation by Crowd.

The president and his party reached the station at 6:45 o'clock, and were given an ovation by the crowd. After escorting Mrs. Wilson to the private car, the president returned to the platform, where he chatted with friends until the time for his train to leave.

Accompanying the president in addition to Mrs. Wilson were Joseph P. Tumulty, his secretary, and Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, his physician. Nearly thirty newspaper correspondents also were aboard the train, in addition to the force of official stenographers and secret service men.

The trip, perhaps the most arduous ever undertaken by a president, will carry Mr. Wilson and his party as far west as the Pacific coast, almost to the Canadian border on the north and almost to Mexico on the south. He will speak in every state west of the Mississippi except four, and make up for the omission of these by speeches in Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and Tennessee.

In point of distance covered, the tour will be almost on a par with the president's trip to France and return, and the members of his party expect it to be much more strenuous because of its continuity and the long rides through the west.

Although the detailed schedule was held in confidence in the interest of safety to the presidential train, it is understood that most of the stops will be only for three or four hours. In Des Moines, Seattle, Los Angeles and Louisville, however, where Sunday stops will be made, the president will have opportunity for brief respites. In Seattle he will review the Pacific fleet.

Vigorous Speaking Schedule.

The speech-making schedule is a vigorous one from the start. After his address at Columbus tomorrow, Mr. Wilson will go to Indianapolis, in time for an evening mass meeting. Then he will continue westward with short stops at St. Louis and Kansas City, reaching Des Moines Saturday for the week-end.

C. F. von HERRMANN,

The following week will take him far into the west by the northern route, with speeches at Omaha, Sioux Falls, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Bismarck, Billings, Helena, Coeur d'Alene, Spokane, Tacoma and Seattle. After that will come Portland, San Francisco, San Diego, Los Angeles, Reno, Salt Lake City, Cheyenne, Denver, Pueblo, Wichita, Oklahoma City, Little Rock, Memphis and Louisville. The return to Washington will be on September 30.

In addition to these scheduled addresses, Mr. Wilson is expected to make some shorter speeches from his train at intermediate stops.

Although it is expected that the president will devote much of his attention to the peace treaty, he probably will also touch on the high cost of living and other domestic problems. It has been pointed out that much of his itinerary lies through the northwest where labor and social unrest has been pronounced.

But the principal message to be taken to the people is expected to relate to the negotiations and treaty of Versailles. After the same manner as he went to the country for his preparedness measures, his advisers say he is prepared to make now the fight of his political life, if necessary, for the peace treaty.

A final survey of the senate situation was given the president late today by Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska, ranking democrat of the foreign relations committee, who called at the white house at Mr. Wilson's request. The president was informed that republican leaders plan to report out the treaty within a few days, probably not later than next Wednesday, and was assured that every amendment involving any "killing" resolution would be defeated overwhelmingly. Specific reservations, it was said, were not discussed and the president warmly approved the immediate plans of the treaty's friends to meet wath Senator Hitchcock termed "was a clean cut issue."

Senator Hitchcock quoted the president as being "pleased and commendatory over the way things are shaping themselves in the senate. Senator Hitchcock declared that the president was entirely satisfied with the situation and glad that the issue had been drawn on the question of amendment of the treaty, confident that on such an issue the friends of the treaty, republican and democratic, will unite against amendments and after defeating the committee proposals, ratify the instrument without change or delay.

Wilson To Explain League.

The president was represented by Senator Hitchcock as being determined to devote his addresses to the people almost entirely to the subject of the treaty of peace and the league of nations and mentioning the high cost of living and the industrial situation in so far as they are affected by delay in the ratification of the treaty or by the prospect of the treaty. The president's main purpose will be to explain workings of the league of nations to the people, the part of the U. S. would have in the settlement of world affairs for maintenance of peace and the results which might be expected from the failure of this nation to join the other great powers in a common effort to make another world war impossible.

In view of the possibility of a new situation confronting the democratic senators through the ability of Senators Lodge and Knox to win over some of the middle ground or reservation republicans to the program of reservations on which majoritw members of the committee are in virtual agreement, Senator Hitchcock discussed with the president the position to be assumed by the treaty supporters.

Senator Hitchcock declared that it was the desire of the president and the friends of the treaty to defeat any and all efforts to amend the treaty in any respect, and that the president feels that the amendments proposed by the foreign relations committee have brought the question squarely before the American people of whether the treaty shall be defeated in so far as the United States is concerned.

"The treaty is a living thing," Senator Hitchcock said, in explanation of the president's stand, "and it is to be a going thing, regardless of the action of the United States. The president hopes to make it clear to the people that we must first get rid of the war before we can settle our domestic problems, and defeat of the treaty certainly does not mean that."

The Irish Question.

Senator Hitchcock was asked if the Irish question had been mentioned by the president, and he stated that it had come up only as one of the factors tending to the delay of the treaty.

"Only the Irish agitators are in favor of the rejection of the treaty," said Senator Hitchcock. "The intelligent Americans of Irish blood realize that they have to depend upon American sympathy and support if they ever are to get home rule for Ireland. Such Irish will hesitate a long time before they will say that the United States shall not enter into this treaty, because by doing that they would lose the home rule sentiment of the United States."

Senator Hitchcock said he did not believe the foreign relations committee proposes doing anything for the Irish, the negroes, the Egyptians other than to conduct hearings. It was simply a part, he said, of the program of "squandering time" by the opponents of the treaty.

"Will the administration then oppose any amendment to the treaty designed to aid the cause of Irish home rule?" the senator was asked.

"It will," he replied.

"Will the administration senators also oppose the Johnson amendment which has for its purpose to give the United States an equal vote to that of Great Britain in the league of nations?"

"The true friends of the treaty," Senator Hitchcock replied, "will oppose any amendment to the treaty, whether good or bad, reasonable or unreasonable, because any amendment means defeat of the treaty."

In explanation of the president's satisfaction with the treaty situation as he left Washington, Senator Hitchcock declared that the president agreed that the course adopted by the foreign relations committee had been such as to bring the treaty before the senate in such form as to make it certain that friends of the treaty would poll their maximum strength against amendments and for ratification without amendment.

Opposed to Any Amendment.

"The president naturally is opposed absolutely to any amendment to the treaty," said the senator. "The American people are to be given to understand that if amendments are adopted it means rejection of the treaty.

"If you dot an 'i' or cross a 't' in the treaty you will take the United States out and isolate us from the rest of the world. Then you would have to go to Germany and negotiate a new treaty. No evils in the present treaty could justify such a course."

Asked if the president had outlined his position with respect to reservations by the senate, instead of amendments to the treaty, Senator Hitchcock gave a negative reply and said that "the time had not arrived to discuss reservations."

The senator did state, however, that the form of Senator Lodge's proposed reservation in connection with Article X of the league of nations bore nothing of a character which could be accepted by friends of the treaty. Senator Lodge has not disclosed the text of his proposed reservation and denied today that Senator Hitchcock had been apprised of the text, but Senator Hitchcock informed the president that it was such that when put up to the "true friends of the treaty on the republican side" it would not be accepted, because it takes "all the strength out of Article X."

Senator Hitchcock declared that no new administration policy with respect to the treaty would be in effect as the result of his conference with the president, and added with respect to the president's speaking trip that Mr. Wilson "assumes the people want the treaty and he is going before them to explain what it means."

Glad of Amendment Issue.

The president and Senator Hitchcock were said to be in complete agreement that the immediate fight should be pressed against the five amendments adopted by the foreign relations committee. The president, it was stated, indorsed the view expressed by Mr. Hitchcock today in the senate that any amendment, no matter how trivial, would have the effect of withdrawing this nation from the treaty and require negotiations with Germany.

"The president," said Mr. Hitchcock after leaving the white house, "is gratified that the issue has been drawn on amendments. He believed the people realize the danger of adoption of any amendment or of a reservation which would have a killing effect. He takes the ground that amendment would cause our withdrawal from the treaty."

Action on reservations, the president was said to feel, can be left for future consideration after the outcome of the fight against amendment.

"The president said he was well satisfied with the way the fight so far has been handled," said Mr. Hitchcock, "and over the very distinct gains made by friends of the treaty and the league. I assured him absolutely that every amendment proposed would be beaten. I told the president that many republicans who favor reservations also are for the treaty and the league, and will not vote for reservations and amendments which would nullify or require re-negotiation."

No Personal Attacks.

President Wilson, also discussed with Mr. Hitchcock his plans for his tour in behalf of the treaty. The president, it was said, will discuss the treaty and especially the league covenant in every address of the trip. Senator Hitchcock said the president would analyze the treaty in detail and emphasize that delay in its ratification was holding up return of the country to normal conditions and also was blocking many reconstruction matters, including virtually all legislation, such as bills to reduce the cost of living and solution of the railroad problem. Personal attacks, however, upon senators opposing the treaty are not planned by the president.

Senator Hitchcock said he told the president that the plans of republicans to follow the executive on his trip and reply to his speeches had been abandoned because, Senator Hitchcock said, he understood "important influences in the republican party had killed the plan."

The president is expected to discuss the opposition to the treaty of those advocating home rule for Ireland and other European peoples, and Senator Hitchcock today advised Mr. Wilson that the foreign relations committee's hearings on those questions were "useless," because, he said, the committee does not intend to report any amendments or reservation to the treaty which have been asked in that respect.

The president's treaty discussions on his trip are expected to evoke prompt replies from republicans in the senate. The final step of committee action—consideration of a resolution of ratification with reservations—is planned for Friday and submission of the treaty for open senate debate is to follow as soon as possible.

Reservations Are Prepared.

As the president departed from the capitol, republican senators on the committe of foreign relations reached what amounted to a virtual agreement as to the form of the reservations which they will urge the senate to adopt as part of the resolution of ratification.

The republicans insisted that not only had a "tentative understanding" as to the nature of the reservations been arrived at among the nine senators who voted for amendment of the treaty in committee, but that the proposed form of he reservations was acceptable to the so-called middle-ground senators on the republican side of the senate chamber.

The committee on foreign relations is expected to take final action on the treaty within a day or two, and some members still are hopeful that it may be reported to the senate this week. An informal conference of the republican members, with the exception of Senator McCumber, of North Dakota, who has voted with the democrats against amendments, was held tonight, and several textual drafts of reservations were considered. It is intended that the nine republicans constituting a majority on the committee without McCumber will have agreed in advance to the form of the reservations before they are submitted to a vote in the committee.

One member of the committee declared that the "tentative understanding" with reservations was an understanding in favor of "reservations that are reservations," indicating that they are to be such as to satisfy the more radical opponents of the treaty.

Unmoved by Pressure.

Republican leaders declared that they are unmoved by the pressure against them for ratification of the treaty without amendment, and that President Wilson is nourishing a false hope if he believes that he can arouse public opinion to such a point as to have their constituents demand a retreat from the treaty opposition. These senators stated that within the last few days former United States Senator Murray Crane, acting in behalf of certain Wall street interests, had approached several republican senators in an effort to expedite ratification of the treaty. It was stated that he had been unable to move them because they took the position that Mr. Crane had supported Taft in 1912 and Hughes in 1916, and that the republican senators accordingly were not inclined to turn to his leadership now.

"Senator Crane did not disturb me in the least," said Senator Lodge.

The so-called "mild" and "strong" reservationists among the republican senators continued negotiations today toward a compromise agreement and Senator Lodge was said to have approved three of the former's proposals—those dealing with the Monroe doctrine, domestic questions and withdrawal from the league—but with agreement still to be reached on a reservation affecting Article X. of the league covenant. Following conferences of republican leaders late today, it was said that, if possible, the proposed reservations would be made public textually tomorrow.

Article X. Stumbling Block.

In the negotiations of the republican factions on reservations, the present stumbling block is said to be on a reservation affecting Article X., with its foreign territorial guarantees. The tentative reservation said to have been drawn by senators demanding "strong" reservations is understood to declare emphatically that the United States "will not" and "refuses" to undertake obligations of these territorial guarantees in advance of specific action by congress, as required by the constitution. Those favoring a more moderate reservation are said to be urging instead that it declare the limitations of congress, under the constitution, without making blunt denials.

The three reservations on which the radical and moderate republican groups are said now to have reached an agreement are said to propose to declare that the United States shall be the sole interpreter of the Monroe doctrine, shall decide all domestic policies, such as tariff and immigration, without intervention by the league, and upon deciding, without judgment of the league, that national obligations have been fulfilled, shall be privileged to withdraw from the league upon notice.

Hearings on European territorial questions, involving the Aland islands and disputes between Hungary and Czecho-Slovakia, were continued today by the foreign relations committee. Tomorrow representatives of Jugo-Slavia will be heard, and Friday the committee plans to close its hearings and consider the resolution o fratification, including reservations.

Nashville, Tenn., September 3.—With the discovery of a plainly visible blood-stained finger print found on the automobile in which Robin J. Cooper, young Nashville attorney, was murdered last Thursday night near Belle Meade Park, police late Wednesday night stated they were nearer a solution of the mystery than they have been since the body was found in Richland creek Saturday morning.

The finger print was found on the rear right door of the machine and can be plainly seen with the eye at a distance of several feet. An examination of the automobile showed other finger prints, but the one most distinct is a blood-stained print on the side of the door, which authorities believe was made by the murderer in removing the slain man from the car.

Expert Bertillon operators have been sent for to make an examination of the finger prints and to photograph the stained car. It is expected that the Bertillon sleuths will arrive Thursday afternoon or Friday. Officers working on the case refuse to say from what city the expert operators would come.

New Developments Expected.

Nashville papers dated July 6, 7 and 10, of this year, and found in the blood-covered automobile, are also being examined for finger prints. The papers are also being held for an additional clue, which, authorities say, might prove to advantage. Chief Deputy Robert A. Moore, who is in possession of the papers, said Wednesday night that he felt certain that new developments would be brought out Thursday in connection with the papers, but refused to reveal his secret.

Still clinging to the first theory that Cooper probably met his death at the hands of a blockade runner or several Nashville boot-leggers the authorities Wednesday examined several other alleged liquor peddlers. A woman, whose name the police refused to reveal, was summoned to headquarters late Wednesday afternoon and rigidly questioned by detectives. They said they were seeking to ascertain the whereabouts of another whisky dealer through the woman. They say she knew nothing regarding the crime.

Business Trouble Suggested.

The police are also investigating a new theory that Cooper might have been killed as the result of a business transaction.

The police have secured evidence, it is stated, that Mr. Cooper on one occasion threatened to expose a concern selling stocks which he is believed by the police to have bought and subsequently discovered to be worthless.

The fact that an argument took place between Mr. Cooper and three men in a prominent office building Thursday morning, the day of the tragedy, is a bit of circumstantial evidence in the new developments.

The trial of Fernando Broxton will be taken up as soon as that of Waters has been closed.

FAIR EXPORT RATES FOR DIXIE PORTS

Washington, September 3.—Preparation of class and commodity rates upon export traffic from the middle west to South Atlantic and gulf ports was ordered today by Director General Hines.

The rates to be established will be substantially the same as the rates to New York on domestic freight and will equalize charges so that southern gateways to South and Central America can compete on equal terms with the east.

Decision to establish the rates is the successful outcome of a long fight carried on by the southern interests for a fair share of the nation's export commerce. The matter was brought to the serious attention of the government by conditions arising during the war, when eastern ports were congested with export shipping while South Atlantic ports had less than they were able to accommodate.

Representations subsequently were made to the shipping board to obtain sufficient cargo space sailing from those ports to take care of outgoing traffic and to the railroad administration to establish equitable freight rates. The following announcement was made:

"Director General Hines has today issued instructions for the preparation of tariffs which will provide for class and commodity rates upon export traffic from points in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, including cities on both banks of the Mississippi river from Dubuque, Iowa, to St. Louis, inclusive, also from points in the southern peninsula of the state of Michigan to South Atlantic and gulf ports from Wilmington to New Orleans, inclusive. When the tariffs have been prepared, the matter will receive final consideration in Washington. The export rates to be established will be substantially the same as the rates which apply to New York on domestic freight from the same points of origin. The export rates to Key West will be the usual differential above the South Atlantic ports. Special consideration is to be given to export traffic when destined to Mexico and Central America, because of the generally low ocean rates from gulf ports to those countries.

"This action is taken after a very thorough study and careful consideration of the movement of traffic and has for its object a more reasonable equalization of rates on export traffic to all Atlantic and gulf ports."

STATE MAY LOSE ROAD EQUIPMENT

Georgia Highway Board Making Every Effort to Prevent Loss of $3,000,000 in Government Materials.

The Georgia state highway board was busy Wednesday using its influence towards getting the Kahn bill passed in congress in order that Georgia may not lose three million dollars of road building material and equipment, and to this end telegrams to all congressional representatives from Georgia were sent by C. M. Strahan, chairman of the newly-created highway commission.

This telegram sent by Professor Strahan follows: "Ruling of judge advocate general of army, distribution of trucks and road building equipment to state highway department. Georgia loses three million dollars equipment already promised to counties. Equipment will be sold under army order in ten days unless Kahn bill is passed immediately. Vitally important to Georgia road building program."

Several days ago the judge advocate general of the army in placing an interpretation on the postoffice appropriation act of February, 1919, which allowed the various states to obtain the war material now valueless to the government for use in road building, ruled that "inasmuch as section 7 of the postoffice appropriation act of February 28, 1919, does not specifically authorize the transfer of motor-propelled vehicles and motor equipment, that this statute is repealed and no further transfers should be made of the above materials."

The decision of the judge advocate general has been approved by the secretary of war and orders have therefore been issued that no more motor-proplled vehicles and motor equipment will be transferred free of charge to the department of agriculture until such time as congress, if it so desires, shall specifically authorize the further transfer of additional motor vehicles and motor equipment.

In order that an opportunity may be given congres sto pass such legislation, if it so desires, looking towards the transfer of such material and equipment, the balance of the vehicles allotted to the department of agriculture will be held by the war department for two weeks. If no further action has been taken by that time it is the secretary of war's intention to authorize the director of sales to promptly proceed with the disposal of these supplies through other channels.

In order to authorize the states, through the agricultural department, to receive this much needed material for roadbuilding, Julius Kahn, representative from California and chairman of the house military committee, has introduced a bill, which must be passed within the next ten days, to prevent the selling of this material by the war department.

Unless this bill passes, Georgia will lose three million dollars worth of machinery, which has already been alloted to the various counties. The first shipment of motor vehicles received in Georgia contained some 160 five ton trucks. But this was only a small part of what Georgia was in line to get. All counites in Georgia mapped out their 1920 program on the idea of having the machinery and supplies alloted them by the state highway department, under the federal postal bill.

Professor Strahan stated Wednesday that it was impossible to realize the benefit the states can secure from the use of such equipment and supplies, and that unless the Kahn bill is passed the work of road building will be greatly retarded in Georgia.

PACT OPPONENTS HIT BY HITCHCOCK

Democratic Leader Says Real Purpose Is to Kill Treaty—Predicts Senate Will Reject Amendments.

Washington, September 3.—Declaring the real purpose of the foreign relations committee majority in amending the peace treaty was to kill the treaty entirely and that such a course would be suicidal to the United States, Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska, democratic leader, asserted in a senate speech today that the majority of the senators never would accept any of the committee changes.

The treaty opponents, he said, "crawl on the ground with a microscope searching for pitfalls" in the league of nations and overlook substantial benefits which the treaty would bring the nation. The proposal of Senator Knox, republican, of Pennsylvania, that the treaty be rejected and a separate peace made with Germany, was characterized by the speaker as an insane "mixture of poltroonery and folly."

"By a vote of nine to eight," said Senator Hitchcock, "the committee on foreign relations is to bring squarely before the senate the question of defeating the pending treaty. Suppose the senate should vote in favor of the Shantung amendment or any other? What would happen?

What Would Wilson Do?

"Either the president would refuse to go further with the treaty, or he would submit the amendment to the nations associated with the United States. Does any one believe they would accept it? Does any one believe that Great Britain, who has already ratified the treaty and who also is under a pledge to Japan with regard to Shantung, would accept the Shantung amendment? Does any one think that France, also under a pledge to Japan, would ratify this change? Does any one suppose that Japan herself would submit to this humiliation before the eyes of the world?

"I cannot conceive of any intelligent and candid man who would assume such a thing as a possibility. We would be met by an instant refusal to accept the amendment, and then where would the United States find itself in this international settlement? We would find ourselves out in the cold, isolated from the rest of the world. The work of ratifying the treaty would proceed without us.

"The treaty itself provides that when three nations in addition to Germany have signed it shall go into effect. It is easy to see the enormous benefits which Great Britain and France will derive from this treaty. They will not take any chances. It is preposterous to suppose that Japan will delay its ratification. The result is beyond all question.

What Would Follow.

"What then will the United States do? Some say that congress can pass a joint resolution declaring a state of peace with Germany. Others say the United States can negotiate a separate and independent treaty. Those who talk this way evidently have no conception of the enormous benefits which the United States derives from this treaty.

"In article 231, Germany is compelled to accept full responsibility for the damages caused by the war. Does any one think if we undertook to negotiate a separate treaty with Germany, Germany would make any such concessions to the United States? Germany might say she had never declared war on the United States; that it was the United States which forced war upon her.

"Take the matter of German property in the United States. Under this treaty all acts of the United States and of the alien property custodian with regard to that property are validated unless Germany can show actual fraud. Is any one insane enough to suppose that Germany will voluntarily make that concession to us if we lose the hold upon her which this treaty gives. Suppose Germany points to the treaties of 1799 and 1828 under which we agreed to respect the private property of German nationals in the United States.

"This treaty creates a commission called the reparations commission. Unquestionably it will be the most powerful international body ever created. It receives from Germany all reparations paid and distributes them to the various nations. Does any one think under the circumstances the United States can afford not to have a representative on the reparations commission?

He Calls It Suicidal.

"To my mind it would be suicidal to throw away the advantages and benefits provided in this treaty. It would be disastrous, commercially and financially.

"Defeat of the treaty by means of proposed amendments to it is the real program and hope of the majority of the committee on foreign relations. It is for this purpose that the treaty has been locked up in cold storage for so many weeks. They have felt justified in retaining the treaty in committee, holding useless hearings and making killing amendments with the full knowledge that amendments would beat the treaty just as effectively as a refusal to ratify.

"A few, a very few, have declared they would vote against the treaty because of the league of nations, but it has remained for Senator Knox to declare boldly against our participation in the peace settlement. To say that he has amazed the country is to put it mildly. He has shocked the country. He formerly favored taking the league of nations out of the treaty and ratifying the peace settlement with Germany. Now he suddenly changes front.

"What has become of the high professions of last year? Last October when Germany sought terms for the armistice, the senators now seeking to kill this treaty shouted for unconditional surrender. They demanded terms of peace dictated to Germany. They insisted that the United States should to the last maintain the closest co-operation with the allied governments. They said it would be a breach of faith if we failed to stand by Poland and other nations formed as a result of the war.

Alleges Change of Front.

"Now what a change! The treaty has been negotiated, Germany has signed it. Germany has ratified it. Great Britain and Belgium have done the same; France, Italy and Japan will do so in rapid succession. The treaty dictates the terms to Germany just as these senators demanded it should.

"But now the same senators who insisted on a dictated peace propose to abandon it and negotiate a peace settlement on terms acceptable to Germany. It is suggested that we desert our associates and negotiate a separate treaty. It is proposed that we adopt a policy of quit and scuttle. It is proposed that we repudiate our obligations and like cravens leave them to be performed by the nations lately associated with us.

"Was there ever a more insane international policy proposed? In the mixture of poltroonery and folly it is difficult to see which predominates. The senator from Pennsylvania goes the limit. He not only proposes that we desert our friends and abandon our obligations; but he suggests that we release Germany from all promises of indemnities and reparations. Why not go further and propose that we compensate Germany? That would be a still stronger appeal to German sentiment.

"He says in so many words, slaughter the treaty, desert our friends, abandon our obligations and yield to Germany. I have full faith that when this treaty is finally released from cold storage it will in the senate receive different treatment. Here, unquestionably, there is an overwhelming majority who desire to finish the work undertaken when we entered the war. Here will be found a safe majority for a peace settlement.

The League of Nations.

"I have spoken of the treaty as a whole. But the league of nations feature particularly has been persistently and unreasonably attacked in this chamber. Those who conjure up these possible disadvantages seem to ignore altogether the enormous advantages of organizing the world for peace.

"They make mountains out of mole hills in reviewing difficulties of the league plan. They are suspicious that while it may benefit every other nation on earth, it is so devised as to bring disaster to the United States. They crawl on the ground with a microscope searching for pitfalls, and are unable to look forward to the promised land of peace and order and justice to which the new movement leads."

ECONOMIC CONGRESS COMING IN OCTOBER

Washington, September 3.—The conference between labor, capital and agricultural interests, called by President Wilson for discussion of the present economic situation, will be held in Washington between October 5 and 10, it was learned today at the white house.

The president wrote today to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, representatives of the leading agricultural associations, investment bankers, and to Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, asking that they submit nominations for delegates representing each group. After receiving this list en route to the Pacific coast, the president will then select a list of his own and combine the two. Forty or forty-five delegates will be chosen.

Preliminary arrangements for the conference were discussed at yesterday's cabinet meeting and it was said at the white house that the full list of delegates probably would be ready within a week.

LABOR CONGRESS MINUS AMERICA

Secretary of Labor Wilson Says No United States Delegates Will Be Named Until Treaty Ratified.

(The Constitution—Philadelphia Public Ledger Service—Copyright, 1919.)

Washington, September 3.—Unless the United States senate has ratified the peace treaty prior to October 29 there will be no representatives of labor from this country present at the sessions of the international labor congress, which under the program of the peace conference was to have been one of the principal features of the initial session of the league of nations.

No preparations are being made by the government for participation in the conference, it was announced by Secretary of Labor Wilson, and nothing will be done until the United States becomes a member of the league of nations.

Officials in administration circles today refused to say whether there was any connection between the announced position of the secretary of labor and President Wilson's call for a conference between the employers and workers of the United States.

It was intimated, however, that the president was determined to reach as speedy a settlement as possible of the domestic situation and that he intended to work out a definite constructive policy for the United States even if this country was unable, due to delay in ratification of the treaty, to share in the benefits expected to accrue to labor as the result of the international conference.

Must Be in League.

"No arrangements have been made for representation of the United States in the international labor conference to begin in Washington October 29 under the terms of the treaty of peace with Germany," said Secretary Wilson. "No arrangements can be made unless and until the senate has ratified the treaty and we have become a member of the league of nations.

"The president will appoint all American delegates to the conference. They will have no diplomatic character. The third paragraph of article 389 provides for the appointment of non-government delegates and advisers chosen in agreement with the industrial organizations which are most representative of employers or of work people, as the case may be.

"In appointing the delegates the president will carry out the spirit of the labor clauses scrupulously and will therefore in appointing delegates to represent employers do so in agreement with those organizations which in his judgment are most representative of them. It is generally understood that the American Federation of Labor is the organization which is most representative of American work people and, therefore, assume the delegates to represent employes will be selected in agreement with that organization.

"The purpose of the conference is to adopt a standard which will secure and maintain a fair and humane condition for men, women and children, with due regard to climate, habits and conditions of living in the respective countries. It will reduce the difficulties of our own industrial problems in so far as the conference may assist in bringing living conditions of our people closer to the ideals they are striving for.

No Lowering of U. S. Standard.

"By no possible stretch of the imagination can it be assumed that there is the slightest chance of any change being made in our living conditions except for the better. Because we might indorse a world standard presents no argument against establishing and maintaining a higher standard. I cannot conceive a possibility of the American standard being lowered by American employers and employees subscribing to a world standard. I call attention in this connection to article 405, which says, 'In no case shall any member be asked or required, as the result of the adoption of any recommendation or draft convention of the conference, to lessen the protection afforded by its existing legislation to the workers concerned.'

"The action of the conference will have only the moral force of the conference itself. It may take the form of a recommendation or of a draft convention. If the proposals take the form simply of recommendations, then they will require action by congress in the form of legislation to make them effective. The conference could not confer any authority on the department of labor not granted to it by congress. If the proposals should take the form of a draft convention we would then have a proposed treaty to be ratified by the senate."

The red hat of a cardinal is said to have cost him at least $2,500.

COLORED BAPTISTS COMPLETE FUNDS FOR NEW CHURCH

The pastor of Wheat Street Baptist church announced at the ground breaking yesterday afternoon that more than ten thousand dollars had been raised in cash in the present effort. This not only breaks all records for any colored church in Atlanta, but in the entire south.

The breaking of the ground on the corner of Auburn avenue and Yonge street, was a solemn and sacred occasion, which was made so by the spiritual fervor of the Christian leaders of the city who took part in the program. Among the touching incidents of the day were the addressed by Rev. Inman Bryant, the aged father of the pastor, and Rev. R. H. Burson, another one of the oldest ministers of the denomination in the state. Among the other speakers were Revs. E. P. Johnson, D. D. Crawford, D. D. Cannon, J. W. Jackson, A. D. Williams and W. J. Trent, secretary of theY. M. C. A. Dr. Bryant closed the program by taking the offering, which was an additional amount to the ten thousand. In a most interesting and eloquent manner he gave a short history of the present struggle since the burning of the church on May 21, 1917. He said that he was planning to build a church that would be a church for all the people as well as for the Wheat street congregation.

FIRST DIVISION MEN ARRIVE FROM FRANCE

New York, September 3.—Four thousand officers and men of the famous First division of the regular army, veterans of some of the bloodiest victories which ever crowned American arms, returned home today on the transports Amphion, Suwanee and Mobile. The little strips of vari-colored ribbons that decorated the tunics of hundreds of the returning soldiers bore silent testimony to the deeds which have made the division historic.

As far as individual decorations were concerned, the palm was borne by the Eighteenth infantry, every man of which wore the Fourragere of the Legion of Honor conferred by the French government just before the unit boarded the Mobile at Brest. But the Eighteenth had little to boast of over their comrades, noticeable the Second Machine Gun battalion, 40 per cent of whom had been decorated. Incidentally, this battalion, which returned under the command of Major S. Warren, of Gainesville, Fla., suffered 70 per cent casualties.

The homeward voyage of the Mobile was saddened by the death of one member of the Eighteenth, Private Floyd Law, of Cutler, Ohio, who was suffering from blood poisoning when the transport sailed, but insisted on being taken aboard because he wanted to return with his regiment. He was operated on by the ship's surgeon and failed to rally from the operation.

On the Mobile was Brigadier General Frank Barker, commander of the First infantry brigade. General Barker, whose home is in Charleston, S. C., went to Paris in 1914 as military attache, and was in temporary command of the First division in October, 1918, until relieved by Major General McGlachin.

NO WOMAN SUFFRAGE FOR VIRGINIA SOLONS

Richmond, Va., September 3.—After one of the hottest parliamentary fights in the history of the Virginia senate that body at midnight refused to reconsider the vote by which it had in the afternoon decided to postpone indefinitely consideration of the resolution declaring the Susan B. Anthony amendment to be an undemocratic interference with rights reserved to the states.

Just as the fight had begun to rage in the upper house, the house of delegates, without debate, passed the same resolution. Practically every parliamentary procedure was invoked in an effort to stem the tide for a slap at the amendment.

The galleries of both branches of the legislature were crowded all day and until far into the night.

President Wilson recently urged the legislature to act favorably on the resolution at once.

"PERSHING'S OWN" TO GUARD GENERAL

Washington, September 3.—"General Pershing's own," the famous picked regiment which represented the American army in the victory parades in Paris and London, will serve as guard of honor for the commander of the American expeditionary force when he leads the parade of the first division in both New

This announcement was made today at the war department. This regiment was selected from the seven regular divisions of the American army overseas and it was given an ovation in both the French and British capitals.

HOUSE VETERANS IN TENTED CITY

With Permission of Park Board, Reunion Committee to Provide Necessities for Bivouac in Piedmont Park.

Piedmont Park, where, fifty years ago, the veterans of today mingled mid laughter and song with an almost forgotten aristocracy, will again ring with the shouts and harbor the smoke from the campfires of the heroes of the lost cause. The park board, in session Wednesday afternoon, unanimously voted to allow the veterans free rein in the park, and also free admission as often as they liked to the Cyclorama at Grant park.

Walter P. Andrews, general chairman of the reunion committee, went before the park board and asked their permission to use the park for the bivouac. The request was immediately granted, and all buildings and other accessories of the park have been turned over to the committee during the reunion.

Asks for Necessities.

Mr. Andrews immediately made a requisition to Washington for tents, cots, blankets, cooking utensils and necessary ranges to care for the veterans during their sojourn in Atlanta. Colonel Jack Hayes, depot quartermaster, has assured Mr. Andrews that there will be little difficulty in supplying the necessities when permission is gained from the war department.

Reports from 25 team captains who have been canvassing the city to secure homes for the veterans during the convention have disclosed congestion in Atlanta residences not dreamed of, Mr. Andrews reported. Though several hundred houses were canvassed, homes were secured for only 190 veterans, where it was hoped they would be secured for 1,200. As a consequence, he observed, while 40 teams are yet to be heard from, it is fully recognized that the congestion is such that it will be impossible to house all the veterans. In view of this, the committee, through Mr. Andrews, appealed to the park board when it was shown that the capitol grounds would not be able to care for all who will come.

"In many ways," Mr. Andrews continued, "this plan will prove much more satisfactory. The veterans wil lenjoy being together in the old bivouac much more than being separated throughout the city."

"It is estimated that homes will be found for 600 veterans by the time the remaining teams report. Besides these, there will be between five and six hundred who will come to Atlanta as the guests of relatives and friends which will not come through the housing committee. But as it is expected that fully 10,000 will be in attendance, this will not begin to take care of them.

To Erect Tent City.

"By erecting the tent city at Piedmont Park we will be able to house all of the hardy veterans and place the feeble ones in the homes which Atlantans have so generously provided.

"The committee is very grateful to those Atlantans who have been able to extend the hospitality of their homes to the visiting veterans. Except in rare instances no one has refused to take them, but it is simply a story of congestion undreamed of by us. One woman told us, who was living in a small cottage, that her daughter and several small children had been forced to move into her home on account of being unable to get a house, her two sons, just released from service, are now sleeping in the hall on a pallet. This is the story we have heard many times.

Begin Preparations.

"Such a condition was experienced in Tulsa last year. The war was on and those in charge of the reunion were unable to obtain any assistance from the government. In consequence, the veterans were housed in churches, stores and other places, but through the kindness of the park board this will not be necessary in Atlanta, with the assistance of the war department."

The reports of the other committees are expected to be filed with the committee within the next day or two, Mr. Andrews observed in closing, and steps will be taken immediately to make all preparations for the bivouac at Piedmont Park.

Name Delegates.

Savannah, Ga., September 3.—(Special.)—Twenty delegates have been named to represent Savannah and the Savannah zone at the world cotton conference to be held in New Orleans October 13 to 16.

Eltinge Is Coming To Atlanta Theater First of Next Week

The Julian Eltinge Revue of Nineteen Nineteen, with that popular star at its head, will be the attraction at the Atlanta September 8-9-10, with a matinee Wednesday. This will be Eltinge's last appearance prior to a world trip and he has gathered a company that is composed of many noted artists from both this and other countries.

In the revue, Eltinge, for the first time, appears and sings in male attire and also gives many impersonations of the fair sex that the theater going public has never before seen him in. He is assisted by such well known entertainers as Leo Beers, Dewey and Rogers, Cleo Gascoigne, Ford and Price, Carville and Gorhada, Littlejohns, Sina Nakada, Marionne and a company of players that are all headliners in their own particular line.

His new playlet, "His Night at the Club," which was suggested by himself and written by June Mathis, is one long, lingering laugh and gives the popular impersonator opportunity to prove his right to the title of light comedian, which he could have no doubt made a wonderful success at, had he not started to portray feminine characterizations. Seats are now on sale.

AMUSEMENTS

Change of Bill.

(At Loew's Grand.)

The program at Loew's Grand for the last half of the week beginning with the matinee today brings a number of novel and unique offerings. The opening offering is that of Norton Brothers, who are billed as paperologists and harmonica experts; Howard and Jenkins have a unique character sketch, "The Sidewalks of New York," which is clever, and Norman and Jeanette introduce some startling tricks on the flying rings. Other acts are Hunter, Chick and Hunter, harmony singers, and Mahoney and Rogers in "A Seashore Flirtation."

On the screen Warren Kerrigan is starred in the feature production, "Come Again Smith," and added features are Loew's Current Events and a new screen comedy.

Mildred Harris.

(At the Tudor.)

Mrs. Charlie Chaplin's (Mildred Harris) first Jewel picture since the production of "When a Girl Loves," is being offered at the Tudor theater. "Home" is the title that has been given to the latest Lois Weber production starring Mildred Harris.

The story of "Home" will send audiences away with a new thought in their minds about the place called home. The story might well have been the inspiration of the song, "Home, Sweet Home," which has been sung in every home of the country. With Mildred Harris as the star, taking the role of the foolish young girl, who forgets the loving care of father and mother and seeks diversion and a rich marriage among the codfish aristocrats of a summer party acquaintance, this photoplay so aptly named is an epic in human emotion.

Douglas Fairbanks.

(At the Criterion.)

In "His Majesty, the American," his first new production which is being shown this week at the Criterion, Douglas Fairbanks plays the role of the young American who simply thrives on thrills and excitement.

"His Majesty, the American" tells a story that demands Fairbanks for its interpretation. It is the tale of a missing heir to the throne of a mythical little kingdom in Europe. Doug is the missing heir, of course, but no one would ever suspect it—least of all, Doug himself. When we find him at the beginning of the story, an adventure-seeking gay young New Yorker, we are totally unprepared for later developments, and his journey to Europe and his capers with royalties and revolutionists is a treat indeed for fun-lovers.

The Criterion Orchestra, Dave Love, conductor, and a Mutt and Jeff comedy are added features on the program.

John R. Gordon.

(At B. F. Keith's Lyric.)

"Meatless Days," a Franklyn Ardell sketch, and consequently a clever one, features John R. Gordon and company in headline position on the new bill opening at Keith's Lyric with today's matinee. Other acts include Tom Moore and Sisters, in a gem of a turn; Diana Bonner, singing comedienne; the Demacos, clever gymnasts, and the Randalls, novelty sharpshooters.

Secret Service Story.

(At the Rialto.)

"The Man Who Stayed at Home," which stars King Baggot at the Rialto this week, is comparable with no other picture you have ever seen, for the reason that it is totally different. It is red-blooded, exciting and throbbing with the tingling thrills of high romance, danger, hazardous exploits, mystery and intrigue. It is an action picture from start to finish.

This great story tells of a perilous fight against heavy odds, carried through to a victorious conclusion by a young American secret service agent. Silenced by duty, this young man cannot even dispel the doubts about him that fill the heart of the girl he loves. He has grom work to do. His is a task of running to earth a desperate band of criminals who would betray United States government secrets to a foreign power.

Clara Horton.

(At the Forsyth.)

Clara Horton is the beautiful star of "The Girl From Outside," the virile Rex Beach story which is making a tremendous hit at the Forsyth this week. This picture, one of the most popular the Forsyth has offered, is presented along with a new Christie comedy.

As one naturally expects in a Rex Beach picture, "The Girl From Outside" tells a red-blooded story, shot full of thrills and romance. In every particular it is a typical Rex Beach story, well worth while for anyone who likes a story with "meat." It is another demonstration of the wonderful versatility of one of the most popular of contemporary authors. The photography is splendid, thanks to exceptionally beautiful Alaskan scenes, and the cost is a stellar one.

Madge Kennedy.

(At the Strand.)

Madge Kennedy is seen in three widely different characters in "Strictly Confidential," at the Strand all this week. She is the slattern of the kitchen and the back halls, an actress on the London stage and finally, the lady and mistress of a great English country home. The picture is just as interesting as the three roles. It abounds in comedy when the one-time "slave" returns to the manor house as its lady to greet all the butlers, maids, footmen and so on who are her relatives. The Strand has a news weekly and "Strictly Confidential."

William S. Hart.

(At the Alpha.)

William S. Hart, in "Breed of Men," today, and Douglas Fairbanks, in "He Comes Up Smiling," on Friday, make an exceptional bill for the next two days at the Alpha. These two great actors of the screen are presented in two of their really great plays; and the patrons of the little Whitehall street house are assured of exceptional entertainment while the two plays hold the screen. These two pictures are Paramount-Artcraft offerings, and are shown during Paramount-Artcraft week.

Marguerite Clark.

(At the Savoy.)

Marguerite Clark in Mrs. Alice Hogan Rice's immortal story, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," is the Savoy Paramount-Artcraft program today. This is one of the funniest pictures on record. On Friday Charles Ray is presented in "Greatest Lightning."

The play derives its name from a racing automobile, the product of the young inventor's genius, which fails to work until the crucial moment in the story. Then it becomes the speed demon that runs down the villain.

MOVIE SUCCEEDS PLAY AT NEW YORK THEATER

George Loane Tucker's picturization of George M. Cohan's "The Miracle Man" is one of the successful motion pictures to succeed a big musical play affected by the treatrical strike in New York city. "The Miracle Man" was put on with but three days' advance advertising at the George M. Cohan theater and opened to crowded houses at $2.00 a seat. Every newspaper in the metropolis has combined in giving "The Miracle Man" congratulatory notices."

GAINESVILLE MAN DIES FROM WOUND

Gainesville, Ga., September 3.—(Special.)—Bill Jones, aged white man of this city, who was shot by unknown parties at his home last Saturday night, died last night at a private hospital. Those implicated in the affair are to be arrested immediately, it is stated.

NO RETALIATION BY UNITED STATES

D. W. McNabb, one of the fliers, is healing rapidly, it was said tonight, and no complications are expected. His companion, Lieutenant Von De B. Johnson, was uninjured, though several bullets pierced the plane's wings.

Daily Flights Are Charged.

Consul Garcia's statement was made after persistent reports that Mexican soldiers were the authors of the attack.

Testimony of Mexican civilians, as well as her soldiers in this district, the consul continued, "showed American airplanes made daily incursions into Mexico, circling over military camps, apparently taking photographs."

In declaring that General Garza, the Mexican commander in the Neuvo Laredo district, "emphatically denies" giving orders to his men to fire at American troops or aircraft, even if they are in Mexico, Consul Garcia said the general had given "positive orders" to his command to refrain from such fire hereafter.

When American troops or airplanes enter Mexico hereafter, the consul says, the soldiers will report on the matter to their commanding officer and a report made to Mexico City for instructions.

Planes Over Chihuahua City.

Chihuahua City, Mexico, September 3.—Two airplanes believed to be American and bearing the numbers E-344 and B-335, flew over Chihuahua City yesterday and disappeared toward the northeast. There have been many unofficial protests from all classes against what is considered as unnecessary proviking acts of the Americans. This is said to be the second appearance of American planes here within a week.

El Paso, September 3.—Colonel Guillermo Valles, assistant chief of staff and personal representative of General Manuel Dieguez, commander of the northeastern military zone, who is here, stated here today two American airplanes flew over Chihuahua City last Thursday. He said they were much larger than the Mexican airplanes and were flying very high. Mexican officials here said today no formal protest had been made to American authorities against the crossing of these planes. A protest was filed here in August, however, against American airplanes flying across the border.

NO ACTION LIKELY BY WASHINGTON.

(The Constitution—Philadelphia Public Ledger Service—Copyright, 1919.)

Washington, September 3.—The state department expanded its policy of watchful waiting in Mexican affairs sufficiently today to make the statement that it was unlikely that any fresh demands would be made upon Mexico as the result of the attack made by a Mexican armed force upon two American aviators, Captain David W. McNabb and Lieutenant von de B. Johnson.

At the same time the Mexican embassy announced that General Ricardo Gonzales has captured the bandits headed by Ramon Diaz responsible for the murder of the American citizen, John W. Correll, on June 16. The men were taken to Tampico, the statement says, for trial, "thus fully satisfying the request contained in the note of the American government presented in consequence of Correll's death."

Complete information concerning the reported firing upon American aviators and the wounding of one by Mexican soldiers has not yet been received by the state department.

It was pointed out at the state department that the absence of international regulations governing the use of aircraft makes it necessary for analogous rules to be applied, and in such circumstances the flight of an American airplane over foreign territory would be analogous to the invasion of such territory. It has been reported that the American aviators when fired upon were over Mexican territory. If a flight over foreign territory is contemplated, the normal way, it was said at the department, would be to get permission from the foreign government for the flight.

Not Like Kidnaping by Bandits.

There was no disposition at the state department to place the firing by Mexican soldiers upon members of America's armed forces constructively or actually in Mexico in the same category as the shooting or holding of American soldiers by Mexican bandits. It was admitted that if the two aviators recently captured and held for ransom by Mexican bandits had been taken into custody by Mexican soldiers, a question might have arisen as to the right of this government to send an expedition into Mexico to recover them.

All indications today pointed to the improbability of the United States making the most recent occurrence an issue between the two governments. It is not unlikely, however, it was believed in some quarters, that the Mexican government itself will make representations to the state department on the subject. It was recalled that whenever the Mexican government has desired to move troops from one part of the country to the other, it being necessary or more economical to have them pass through United States territory the permission of the state department has always been requested.

The state department still withholds from publication the recent Mexican protest against the "hot trail," the expedition recently sent into Mexico by the United States against the bandits who were detaining two American army aviators.

No statement was made by state department officials on the capture of the Correll bandits.

GEORGIA MAN HAD QUITE A SIEGE

In Hospital, But Improved Greatly After Taking Ziron Iron Tonic.

In a recent statement, J. H. Martin, of Mount Vernon, Ga., says:

"I was in the hospital with stomach trouble and had quite a siege. It seemed I would never get my strength back after I came out, I had been so ill. I ached all over. I was nervous, restless and yet did not feel like getting around. My skin was yellow. My appetite poor. I was in pretty bad shape and began to look around for a tonic. I felt like part of the trouble was lack of iron in my blood. I was so easily worried, so easily upset. I heard of Ziron and knew it would help me. I began to take it and the improvement was great. It strengthened me, renewed my nerves and toned up my system."

When you feel that you need strength, remember that Ziron is a perfected preparation of iron salts, combined with other strength-giving ingredients. Try Ziron—(adv.) ZN-3.

CHICKEN HOUSES SCENES OF PARTIES

the hands of the county chief of police, with full authority to close the places if he deems it necessary, was unanimously passed.

The resolution was introduced after Commissioner Turner, chairman of the police committee, asked that the board act in the matter. Mr. Turner and Chief Mathieson stated that complaints had been made that several of the road houses in question were the scene of all-night parties in which "wild women" and frequent calls for the county police by the proprietors played a part. It was brought out in the discussion of the houses that several nights ago the police received a call from the proprietor of one of the road houses to rush men out to the scene to save his property from his guests. The call came in about 3:30 a. m., it was stated. Later the proprietar asked for police protection for his road house all night.

No Right to Protection.

Commissioner Mills stated that any proprietor who entertained such unruly guests at such an hour has no right to ask that the county police protect his place. He further stated at the meeting that he had been approached by citizens of Cobb county, who stated that if Fulton county did not do something to tame down the parties in these houses, a delegation from Cobb would ask the federal judge for this district to take a hand.

Chief Mathieson was instructed not to keep police on duty at the houses, but to have them police the roads as usual, and in the event the proprietors allowed their guests to get so rough that they had to call for the police, to have the police bring the entire party to the Tower, where Sheriff Lowry would look after them with more dignity and less noise.

A recommendation by the grand jury that a machine gun be bought and installed in the jail was referred to the building committee.

Tax Equalization Meeting.

Following a letter from State Tax Commissioner H. G. Fullbright, asking the commission to name a representative to attend a meeting to be held in Atlanta during November for the purpose of discussing the equalizing of taxes between the various counties in the state, Commissioner Oscar Mills was elected to represent Fulton and confer with Judge Fullbright.

A proposal was submitted by the M. C. Kiser Realty company to sell to Fulton county, for use as the Fulton High school, the building on oSuth Pryor street occupied by the Commercial High school of the city of Atlanta. The building is leased by the city, and the lease expires on January 1. The city has been notified that the rent will be raised to $12,000 a year. The city has made no negotiations looking to a renewal. Hence the offer to sell to the county. The price asked is $150,000. The proposal was referred to the public building committee.

Commissioner Poole announced that the county had sold an old wooden building, which was located on Central avenue just back of the courthouse, for $340.

The assistant probation officer reported that there were at present 155 persons on probation in the county. There were six probations this month, one discharge and two recommitments.

BACKED BY WOMEN, CHOSEWOOD WINS

very much larger percentage of their registration than did the men. Clerks at the polls at first tried to keep an account of the number of women's ballots, but as they became swamped with the task of counting the executive committee race they were forced to give this up.

CHOSEWOOD WINS EASILY.

Figures last night showed that Chosewood had received 4,906 votes for alderman to 1,638 for Belcher, giving the victor a majority of 3,268. Returns on the Belcher-Chosewood race are given by wards, as follows: First ward, Belcher received 57, and Chosewood 155 votes; second ward, precinct A, Belcher 108, Chosewood 133; precinct B, Belcher 7, Chosewood 28; third ward, precinct A, Belcher 152, Chosewood 632; precinct B, Belcher 25, Chosewood 176; fourth ward, Belcher 80, Chosewood 151; fifth ward, precinct A, Belcher 63, Chosewood 143; precinct B, Belcher 30, Chosewood 133; sixth ward, precinct A, Belcher 44, Chosewood 202; precinct B, Belcher 128, Chosewood 343; seventh ward, precinct A, Belcher 152, Chosewood 405; precinct B, Belcher 71, Chosewood 127; eighth ward, precinct A, Belcher 182, Chosewood 616; ninth ward, precinct A, Belcher 177, Chosewood 160; precinct B, Belcher 160, Chosewood 354; tenth ward, precinct A, Belcher 31, Chosewood 106; precinct B, Belcher 104, Chosewood 255; eleventh ward, precinct A, Belcher 63, Chosewood 211; precinct B, Belcher 4, Chosewood 34.

Votes in Wards.

Tenth ward: T. Frank Calloway precinct A, 96, precinct B, 220, total, 316; Dr. H. N. Alford, precinct A, 164, precinct B, 80, total, 290.

Seventh ward: C. C. Baggs, precinct A, 377, precinct B, 123, total, 500; W. C. Davis, precinct A, 210, precinct B, 45, total, 209.

Third ward, F. C. Woodall, precinct A, 406, precinct B, 104, total, 510; G. W. Cooper, precinct A, 283, precinct B, 77, total 360; F. E. Hoffman, precinct A, 94, precinct B, 20, total, 114.

Fifth ward: Dr. J. B. Golden, precinct A, 144, precinct B, 157, total, 301; C. V. Pinion, precinct A, 69, precinct B, 12, total, 81.

Eleventh ward: J. H. Olson, precinct A, 191, precinct B, 31, total, 222; John Faith, precinct A, 109, precinct B, 10, total, 119.

The women showed their greatest concerted voting strength in the race for the city executive committee, in which four candidates from each ward were to be elected from the city at large. They joined hands in evening scores with a number of the incumbents who had engaged with them in a controversy over the disposition of the women's registration fees.

Candidates Unopposed.

The candidates who ran without opposition and were elected were W. Zode Smith, manager of waterworks; Paul Fleming, commissioner of schools from the fourth and ninth wards; D. R. Wilder, alderman from the fourth ward; W. S. Richardson, alderman from the seventh ward; E. Harry Goodhart, alderman from the eighth ward; J. L. Carpenter, alderman from the eleventh ward.

Al H. Martin, councilman from the second ward; Claude L. Ashley, councilman from the fourth ward; W. D. Hoffman, councilman from the eighth ward, and J. C. Murphy, councilman from the eleventh ward for the short term.

In the first ward, fourth ward and eleventh ward there was no opposition for the city executive committee, and in the first ward T. J. Akridge, J. L. Peacock, R. F. Pennington and Amos Z. Shipp were elected; in the fourth ward, F. A. Hollingsworth, W. D. Mills, Carroll Summers and L. A. Trowbridge were elected, and in the eleventh ward, T. N. Clyatt, George B. Long, C. C. Ray and J. P. Wall were elected.

Although E. C. Buchanan, chairman of the city executive committee, last night conceded his own defeat and declared he thought the old committee had also lost out due to the adverse votes of the women, returns received early this morning and complete except for a few precincts, would indicate that although Mr. Buchanan has probably lost, a number of the other old committeemen have been re-elected.

In the second ward, W. H. Burroughs is probably defeated, although O. H. Ellis and W. R. Freeman are both making a fair showing.

In the third ward H. N. Pannell and J. C. Williams also stand a good chance of re-election.

In the fifth ward F. M. Leathers and J. T. Mitchell and J. S. Harris all seem practically sure of re-election.

In the sixth ward, Thomas Goodwin is also making a good race and will probably be one of the four men elected.

Jesse W. Armistead has a good lead in the seventh ward, but W. F. Grant and S. A. Traynham will probably suffer defeat.

J. M. Hollowell and R. M. Jones are probably re-elected in the eighth ward, but G. W. Polk is probably defeated.

Both E. C. Buchanan and C. P. Bentley were trailing in the returns in the ninth ward.

In the tenth ward W. E. Johnson is making a good race, but G. A. Morris is probably defeated.

"The result is a commentary on the gratitude of the women," said Mr. Buchanan. "I have no personal feeling against them. So far as I was personally concerned, I have treated them with what I thought was fair consideration, and have lived up to every agreement made with them.

"I would not sacrifice my principle as a man," he declared, "for the purpose of gaining all the votes in the land."

Women Vote First.

Women were among the first voters at a number of precincts, Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, president of the Georgia Woman Suffrage association, being one among them. Miss Bessie Epting opened the balloting for women at precinct A, in the fifth ward. Not only did women visit the polls to exercise their privilege of voting, but within the polling places in nearly all wards women clerks were stationed.

One feature of the day was the quiet and order prevailing at every polling place. This was more marked, said observers, than has ever been noted before and was attributed to the presence of the fair sex.

In a statement Wednesday night following his election, Robert H. Jones, Jr., said: "I am delighted to learn of my election to council from the ninth ward. It has been a spirited contest from the start, and has quickened the interest of the people from this section of the city.

"The substantial majority accorded me is not to be regarded as a personal tribute nearly so much as an expression on the part of the citizens in favor of clean politics.

"I wish to take this means of thanking my numerous loyal friends who so untiringly devoted themselves to a cause which they espoused as their own. My only regret is that the campaign could not have been kept on the high plane which I so desired."

J. H. Olson, nominee from the eleventh ward, said: "I am thankful for the loyal support of my friends. I intend to do my very best work in the interest of the city at large."

The executive committee will meet today at noon at the city hall for the purpose of ratifying the returns in the election of Wednesday.

STIFF ULTIMATUM SENT TO RUMANIA BY ALLIED POWERS

Paris, September 3.—The supreme council today decided to send an ultimatum to the Rumanian government regarding her course in Hungary.

The ultimatum, couched in drastic terms and with a time limit, will be delivered by an envoy of the council. Should Rumania refuse to comply with the terms within a given time diplomatic relations will cease and the allied envoy will bring away with him from Bucharest the allied diplomatic representatives there.

The difficulty encountered by the council was in finding a satisfactory representative who was willing to undertake the task. Apparently, it has no desire to select an American for the mission, as the European members are said to feel that he would be likely to prove too outspoken.

The sensation of the year in the drug trade is Aspironal, the Two-Minute cold and cough reliever, authoritatively guaranteed by the Laboratories; tested, approved and most enthusiastically endorsed by the highest authorities, and proclaimed by the common people as ten times as quick and effective as whisky, rock and rye, or any other cold and cough remedy they have ever tried.

All drug stores are now supplied with this wonderful new elixir, so all you have to do, to get rid of that cold, is to step into the nearest drug store, hand the clerk a half dollar for a bottle of Aspironal and tell him to serve you two teaspoonfuls with four teaspoonfuls of water in a glass. With your watch in your hand, take a drink at one swallow, and call for your money back in two minutes if you cannot feel your cold fading away like a dream, within the time limit. Don't be bashful, for all druggists invite you and expect you to try it. Everybody's doing it.

HOME COOKING

By MRS. M. A. WILSON

Queen Victoria's Former Cuisiniere

(Copyright, 1919, for The Constitution.)

Late Summer Pickles.

September is the ideal month for pickling and preserving. We still have late peaches at this time, as well as many other fruits and vegetables.

Pickled Cauliflower.

Trim four large cauliflower and then cut the floweret into small branches and place in a preserving kettle, and cover with boiling water. Boil for fifteen minutes and then drain. Now place in preserving kettle

Two quarts of vinegar,
One quart of water,
One cup of brown sugar,
Two tablespoons of salt,
One tablespoon of paprika,
Two tablespoons of mustard seed,
One tablespoon of celery seed,
One-half ounce of cloves,
One-half ounce of allspice.

Bring to a boil and cook for five minutes, and then fill the cauliflower into one-half-pint all-glass jars and fill to overflowing with the prepared vinegar. Adjust the rubber and lid and seal. Place in hot water bath and process for fifteen minutes, then cool and store.

Piccalilli.

Wash and chop fine

Two medium-sized heads of cabbage,
One-quarter peck of onions,
One-half peck of green tomatoes.

Place in a large crock and sprinkle over the finely chopped cabbage and onions and tomatoes two cups of salt. Add one cup of cold water and let stand overnight. In the morning drain and place in a preserving kettle

One and one-half dozen green and red peppers, chopped fine,
One pound of brown sugar,
Six tablespoons of cinnamon,
One-half tablespoon of allspice,
One teaspoon of cloves,
One teaspoon of nutmeg,
Four teaspoons of paprika

and then add one quart of water and sufficient vinegar to come to one-half depth of the mixture in the kettle. Bring to a boil and cook very slowly until the mixture is thick, usually about one and one-half hours. Fill into all-glass sterilized jars and adjust the rubber and lid and seal. Process in hot water bath for fifteen minutes and then cool and store in a cool, dry place.

This recipe came to me from the mountain region of the Carolinas, where it has been in use for more than 200 years. It is delicious, and when it is made you will feel amply repaid for your trouble.

Pickled Onions.

Place one-half basket of the small white pickling onions in the preserving kettle and cover with cold water. Bring to a boil and cook for ten minutes; then remove and place under the cold running water. Peel and drop each onion as fast as you remove the skins into a large pan containing one cup of salt to every three quarts of water. Now drain well and fill into all-glass jars, adding pieces of dried red-pod peppers. Fill jars to overflowing with white vinegar and adjust the lid and seal. Process in hot water bath for fifteen minutes and then cool and store.

Do not use any other but all-glass jars for pickling foods. This means that the porcelain-lined lid jar will not do. The jar and lid must be of glass.

Lancaster County India Relish.

Chop fine

One head of cabbage,
Six red peppers,
Six green peppers,
Eighteen large onions,
Six large stalks of celery,
One dozen cucumbers,
Eighteen large green tomatoes.

Place in a large bowl or crock and sprinkle with one cup of salt. Let stand overnight and then drain well and turn into a preserving kettle and add

Three pints of strong cider vinegar,
One pint of water,
One and one-half pounds of brown sugar,
One tablespoon of black pepper,
One tablespoon of paprika,
One-half tablespoon of cinnamon,
One teaspoon of mustard,
One-half teaspoon of allspice,
One-quarter teaspoon of nutmeg.

Stir to thoroughly blend and then bring to a boil and cook very slowly until thick, and then fill into all-glass jars and adjust the rubber and lid and seal. Process for fifteen minutes in a hot water bath and cool. Store in the usual manner.

This delicious Moravian recipe has been the secret of an old Lancaster family since 1740 and this is the first time that anyone other than the family has had access to it.

WHITE MAN

BY GEORGE AGNEW CHAMBERLAIN.

A Story on Unconventional Love

Already she had been leaning for some time against the tree trunk, not with her hands alone, but with all of her body that could find any restful purchase. Now she straightened and feeling unusually meek at continuing quite unnoticed, picked her way through the dense and ill-smelling throng to go to her room and try to forget herself and her surroundings in the pages of a back-home book.

That night M'sungo was too tired to talk and excused himself immediately after dinner. Andrea read until her eyes ached and then went to bed wondering if she were feeling only slighted or if existence were actually becoming monotonous. She shrank from the latter admission for she knew that, once made, it would shatter the longest run of sheer peace of spirit which she had experienced in her short but much bored life. She need not have worried. When she stepped out early next morning dressed for the field in compliance with a message from M'sungo to put on her roughest and toughest she was so excited that even the memory of her doubt was blotted from her mind. Something was in the air of the craal that could be felt rather than heard, the sort of something that one could imagine possessing a hive just before it began to hum.

M'sungo was already sitting under the dining tree engaged in a diminutive palaver with three wizened blacks who squatted on the ground squinting up at him and speaking in turn in answer to his patient questioning. Around them but at a respectful distance were gathered various members of the camp's personal staff. On the faces of the wizened three and also on M'sungo's was the same look of fanatical exaltation, the look that proclaims any group of divers men brothers at heart.

"What is it?" asked Andrea, breathless from hurrying.

"Elephant," replied M'sungo. He drew a chair to his side. "Sit down," he said softly as one whose mind is half-narcotized and fearful of losing the dream. "Watch and listen for these men bring great tidings." He smiled almost like a boy.

One of the wizened produced a thin wand, about twenty inches in length, freshly broken at one end. He passed it to his companions who stared at it as though they saw it for the first instead of the hundredth time, fingered it, gurgled over it and finally gravely handed it to M'sungo. He went through more or less the same process and returned it to the man who had first produced it with what was apparently a slighting remark.

The man glanced up with a pained look on his face, arose, laid the wand on the ground as a measure and with laborious fingers began to trace a mighty oval. M'sungo leaned across the table and gazed with fascinated eye; Andrea, watching him, could see the pulse throbbing at his temples. He was a new M'sungo, somebody young, approachable, lovable, an eager boy.

She leaned close to his shoulder. "Please, White Man," she murmured, "please tell me."

Without turning he put one hand out and grasped her wrist as though to still her. "The little man," he explained, "is drawing the spoor of a mighty beast. Look at it and learn it by heart for it will be a photograph."

Having completed the circumference of his oval, the native was making various tracings on its face, dividing it as with a maze of tracks. When he had apparently finished, he sank back on his heels and gazed critically at his handiwork.

"Watch," said M'sungo. "Before he gets up, he'll put in some mark, some distinctive feature that distinguishes this spoor from all others."

No sooner had he spoken than the black leaned forward and with a sure touch deepened two of the cracks till they formed a long narrow V running diagonally half across the oval. That done he turned abruptly from his drawing, joined his comrades, turned his back on M'sungo and unstoppering a cartridge case, proceeded to take snuff.

M'sungo straightened with a long quivering sigh. "It is well," he said in dialect. "We will go." The three wizened men nodded their heads many times and grunted. With no further instruction, gun-bearers, water boys, trackers and Marguerite's attendant scattered to their various preparations, hindered by excited women and children. The camp hummed. Bathtub slapped breakfast on the table and then stood on one foot, then on the other in impatience. On the faces of all was the same half-smile, the same look of suppressed but mighty anticipation.

M'sungo ate a few mouthfuls, but they seemed to choke him. He pushed back his plate, stuffed his pipe full and lit it. His eyes played over Andrea's face and fired hers with their own brilliance. When he spoke every word thrilled her as though this wonderful morning were surcharged with an emotional current sensitive to every sound and movement.

"Andrea Pellor," he said with a happy twinkle of mock solemnity in his glance, "you are about to be initiated into the mystries of the major guild of many centuries, the closest corporation of sport in the world; in three words, the society of elephant hunters. You will probably witness death and I hope and pray it will be the death of the hunted, but for the comfort of your soft heart let me tell you that today we go forth not to slaughter but to battle."

He turned his eyes from her face and continued in a more serious strain. "The hunting of elephant is a science. It is a crescendo of delicacy balanced factors that starts from two distant points and beginning on a cool foundation of mutual respect passes upward through stages of intelligence against intelligence, caution for caution, perseverance on the heels of endurance, until it meets on the high plane of naked courage and sweeps to its tragic climax of white-hot battle and death."

His eyes came back to hers frankly. "Like all the great sciences," he continued, "it has used the lives of valiant men for stepping-stones so that we who go out today are backed by the age-long sacrifice of a noble company. Looking back only to the days of black powder and the four-bore rifle we are mere pygmies, but pygmies carried high on the crest of an ancient tradition. It's because we have an accumulation of knowledge to lean upon that I'm willing to take you with me today if you'll promise to surrender yourself to me, to do just exactly what I tell you and no more and no less."

Eyes wide and intent, cheeks flushed and lips parted, Andrea was too excited to speak. She threw out both hands toward him in a gesture of abandon and with an imploring gravity that made her look as though she were giving herself into his keeping not for a day, but for all time.

We're Ready Now for the BOYS

Ever see folks stand on tip-toe, eagerly waiting for something to happen? That is the uncomfortable position we have been in for several weeks.

Anxious for the contractors to complete our new buildings.

Anxious for the new apparel to hasten in.

Anxious to get the boys' department open on the second floor so as to satisfy the anxiety of so many young fellows who have patiently waited for this Junior Department to announce ready.

True, the second floor department, which is to be the permanent place for the boys, has not been completed, but rather than wait several more days, we have made temporary provision for showing the goods on the main floor.

So, come in, boys—bring your mothers or dads and take a peek at some real lively boyish clothes. The best in the land.

U. S. BAR IS GREETED BY BAR OF ENGLAND

Boston, September 3.—The greetings of the bench and bar of England were brought to the American Bar association at its annual meeting here today by Viscount Finlay, former lord chancellor of England. The famous jurist, who has been mentioned as likely to be Great Britain's choice for presiding officer at the trial of William Hohenzollern if the former German emperor is brought before an international tribunal, said that the legal profession of England was proud of the development which the common law of England had received in the United States.

"It is, indeed, a great heritage, that of the common law of England, to which we of both sides of the Atlantic have fallen heir," Viscount Finlay said. "You, like yourselves, are proud of its traditions and of the spirit of liberty which it breeds."

Viscount Finlay said the relations between the judiciary bench in England and the judiciary bench in America have ever been most cordial, and that the same was true of the relations of the bars of the two countries.

"We recognize to the full," he added, "the assistance which reference to American decisions in illustration of the points of difficulty has afforded."

RACIAL BITTERNESS LAMENTED BY MOTON

Tuskegee, Ala., September 3.—R. R. Moton, Booker T. Washington's successor as principal of Tuskegee institute, declared in a statement today regarding the recent race riots in several cities in the north and south, that it was difficult to understand why there should be so much apparent suspicion and bitterness on the part of both the white and negro races.

"I have never known the colored people to have more intense feeling towards the white people than at the present," Dr. Moton said, "and I have never known a time when there was less reason. I never knew a time when the white people of the south, not only the leading white people, but the average white man, was more anxious than at present to be absolutely fair and just to the negro. To see to it that the colored race in the south had better school facilities, better railroad accommodations, and adequate protection under the law. This is also true of the north.

"There was never a time when the south, and the north, too, saw more clearly the value of the negro as an economic factor in industrial operations. I never knew a time when southern white people felt more chagrined and humiliated at the awful crime of lynching than they do today, and I never knew a time when they were more determined to put down mob rule, whether aimed at black or white, than now. Many of the leading papers of the south are speaking out as never before against all forms of injustice and unfairness to the colored race.

"We, north and south, should make up our minds that there is room enough, there is opportunity enough for colored and white to work peacefully and harmoniously here in America, each living his life unhampered by any act or any untoward attitude of the other, and I hope that our leaders in every community, white and black, will get together and smooth out matters that are misunderstood, so that America can teach the world that black people and white people can live peacefully and harmoniously in our great country."

A DISCOVERY THAT BENEFITS MANKIND

Two discoveries have added greatly to human welfare.

In 1835 Newton originated the vacuum process for condensing milk with cane sugar to a semi-liquid form.

In 1883 Horlick at Racine, Wis., discovered how to reduce milk to a dry powder form with extract of malted grains, without cane sugar.

This product HORLICK named Malted Milk. (Name since copied by others.) Its nutritive value, digestibility and ease of preparation (by simply stirring in water) and the fact that it keeps in any climate has proved of much value to mankind as an ideal food-drink from infancy to old age.

PACKING MEASURE STOUTLY FOUGHT

Many Witnesses Tell Senate Committee Bill to Regulate Packing Concerns Will Prove Hurtful.

Washington, September 3.—Heads of the two largest packing concerns in the United States outside of the "big five," a scattering of stock raisers and meat dealers, and a representative of the Chicago Board of Trade were among opponents of the Kenyon and Kendrick bills for the regulation of the packing industry heard today by the senate agriculture committee.

Senator Kenyon, republican, Iowa, cross-examined W. D. Reynolds and J. H. Nail, two Fort Worth, Texas, ranchers, bringing out admissions that they had been paid expenses by the packers after appearing before congressional committees on a previous occasion, when legislation considered inimical by the "big five" was under consideration, but both men insisted they did not expect reimbursement for this trip.

L. F. Gates, for the Chicago Board of Trade, gave the committee a specific argument in opposition to the bills.

"This is a law of rules and executive orders," he said, referring to the Kenyon bill, "rather than a law of specific provisions.

"A change of executives means a change in the requirements of the law upon the citizen. Men cannot tell from day to day what is legal under it.

Opposes Blanket Authority.

"It is an instance, I think, of the habit of legislating blanket authority to executive departments which grew up during the war.

"If the theory of licensing business operation is good, why not extend it? If the trouble is with the five large packers, why not treat them directly, instead of extending a control to an entire industry? Is not the Sherman law strong enough to enforce competition? If not, amend and strengthen it. Is not the federal trade commission law strong enough to enforce square dealing? If not, then strengthen it.

"There are no conditions within my knowledge which make it seem necessary for the return to paternalism and autocratic control; legislation in times of peace should be a serious attempt to solve definite problems by definite means."

J. C. Dold, of Buffalo, objected to the licensing, but suggested an authorized conference commission for the industry, to be made up of representatives of the interests concerned. Chairman Gronna read him a section of the federal trade commission report on the industry, declaring that his house and the Cudahy company of the "big five" had an agreement to split even all hog receipts at the Wichita (Kansas) yards, where he has a plant.

"I deny it," Dold said. "That comes about because our plants there are of equal capacity. If Cudahy goes in one day and hogs the market, he knows that the next day we'll make him pay for his stuff, so we run along evenly."

"The report says that you and Cudahy also own the stock yards there," Chairman Gronna pointed out.

"We don't," Dold replied. "Cudahy does own some part. That came about when the town of Wichita was trying to get the Cudahy plant there. They gave him a bonus, and Cudahy was slick enough to hold off until they gave him an interest in the yards, too. We got a bonus, but didn't get the other."

Opened Fire on Witness.

Senator Keynon, republican, of Iowa, author of the principal regulative measure, opened fire on W. D. Reynolds, a Fort Worth, Texas, cattleman, as soon as the witness took the stand.

"You are the same man who came down here to testify for the packers when the Borland resolution, proposing an investigation, came up?" Senator Keynon asked.

"I am," Reynolds responded.

"Well, they paid a part of them."

"Will you tell this committee now that you do not expect to be paid again?"

"I do; I expect to pay my own expenses."

Senator Kenyon also introduced a telegram from Thomas Creigh, general attorney for the Cudahy Packing company, denying a charge made yesterday that that corporation owned the Coffin Packing company of Denver, the manager of which appeared recently as an independent packer opposing the pending legislation.

J. H. Nail, another Fort Worth cattleman, attacked the Kenyon and Kendrick bills as "impractical and unnecessary." He said licenses and regulations might "tie up the industry so that a steer would die of old age before is owner could get the money out of him."

"You came down with Reynolds to testify against the Borland resolution?" asked Senator Kenyon.

"Yes, sir."

"They paid your expenses as well?" Senator Kenyon asked.

"Yes, they came to me and asked me to come."

"You expect the same result, however, this time?"

"No, I don't. I've got as much money to pay my expenses as Swift has."

ON 131ST BIRTHDAY HE DECIDES TO GET LIFE INSURANCE

Lexington, Ky., September 3.—"Uncle Johnny" Shell, probably the oldest man in the world, prepared today to celebrate his 131st birthday by sending for a life insurance agent.

"You never can tell what'll happen, sonny," he told the agent. "And I want to prepare for the worst."

The agent looked over his rate card and found that his card covered only the first 105 years of a man's life. The agent is now busy with his headquarters trying to learn if he can insure "Uncle Johnny."

11,000 U. S. Automobiles Piled Up at Holabird; Damaged by Weather

Washington, September 3.—Testimony today before the sub-committee on ordnance of the house war investigating committee showed that 11,000 automobiles, including many of the popular makes, are piled up at Camp Holabird, near Baltimore.

Major H. C. P. Evans, of the motor transport corps, in charge of this camp said no steps were taken to dispose of the cars after they were put in shape for sale and placed in open parking last March. Many of them have never been uncrated, and comparatively few have been distributed to highway commissions for road work.

The list includes 1,300 pleasure automobiles, 3,660 motorcycles and side cars, 2,528 trucks and 1087 ambulances. Some of the latest models of makes are held.

Major Evans told Chairman Reavis, of the sub-committee, he did not know why the cars had not been sold. He denied all are perfect. Weather conditions are damaging them, he admitted.

FIVE ALLEGED BANK ROBBERS ARE INDICTED

Webb and Two News Will Be Put on Trial in Lawrenceville Monday.

Lawrenceville, Ga., September 3.—(Special.)—True bills were found today against Olin New, of Martin district, his cousin, E. F. New, of Atlanta, and F. W. Webb, of Atlanta, and two other men, Mix and Lowery, woh have not yet been apprehended, following an investigation of evidence in connection with the robbery of the Farmers' and Merchants' bank, of Duluth, August 7. Olin New and his cousin, with Webb, will be tried next Monday. All three of the alleged robbers are in jail in Gwinnett county.

The bank robbery was one of the most sensational in the history of this section and created great excitement. Many shots were fired at the automobile, driven by one of the bandits, and officials in several counties joined in the chase that led toward Atlanta.

The robbers succeeded in eluding capture on the morning of the daring holdup, and no arrests were made for more than three weeks, when F. W. Webb was arrested in Atlanta. According to the officers making the capture, Webb made a complete confession, implicating Lowery and Mix, with the two News. He has stuck to this story, and it is understood will give state's evidence at the coming trial.

Both Olin New and his cousin have maintained from the day of their arrest that they had no knowledge of the crime, and Fred New styled Webb as "crazy" when confronted with the evidence of the confession he is said to have made.

Mix and Lowery left Atlanta, where they have lived for some time, before the officers in charge of the case could place them under arrest, and have not yet been apprehended. It is understood from the Pinkerton agency, of Atlanta, which has been placed in charge of the case, that these men will be arrested at an early date.

Developments in the affair followed thick and fast after the arrest and alleged confession of Webb, and Detectives Arthur and Chaffin, of the Atlanta department, succeeded in locating the car alleged to have been used in the robbery. According to these officers, a negro named "Lige" Best, a taxicab driver in Atlanta, admitted that Fred New, with a party of associates, rented his machine for a trip to north Georgia on the day before the robbery took place. According to the detectives, Best stated that when his machine was returned to him, two bullet holes were visible on the rear of the automobile, and the top of the car showed signs of having traveled at high speed.

STRIKE AT COLUMBUS STOPS STREET CARS

Columbus, Ohio, September 3.—Columbus awoke this morning to find an unexpected strike of motormen and conductors on its street car lines. Thousands of workers, who were forced to walk or ride to work on wagons and trucks, were late in reaching their work.

The union car men stated the strike had been called to obtain better working conditions and higher pay, but their demands were not made public early today. They said the strike of the motormen and conductors was not in sympathy with striking linemen of the street car company.

SENATE PASSES OIL LEASING BILL

Important Amendments by Senator Harris, of Georgia, Incorporated in Measure, Which Now Goes to House.

Washington, September 3.—Without a record vote the senate tonight after a twelve hour session passed the bill to make possible the leasing of public lands having deposits of oils, coal, gas, phophate and sodium.

In passing the measure the senate approved amendments offered by Senator Harris, democrat, Georgia, which would provide that under Clayton anti-trust act oil companies may not charge different prices in various parts of the country.

Harris Amendment.

Another amendment, which its author, Senator Harris, said would cause the constituent companies of the Standard Oil company soon to become independent in ownership in fact as in name, was adopted. This amendment would prohibit the stockholders of corporations producing petroleum and its by-products from acquiring stock in another corporation similarly engaged if both corporations have been created in conformance with a court dissolution decree or for the purpose of avoiding prosecution under anti-trust acts.

With the exception of the Harris amendments, the fate of which is uncertain in the house, the leading measure as to its important features was passed as reported by the public lands committee.

Consideration of the bill was marked by bitter debate during which Senator La Follette, republican, Wisconsin, who in the last six days has spoken more than 20 hours, and other senators, charged that the bill was for the benefit of the Standard Oil company.

Provisions of Bill.

Leasing of land under the bills is placed under the secretary of the interior and in case of local lands the bill provides for a royalty of not less than five cents or more than twenty cents a ton shall be paid. Alaskan coal lands are excluded from the bill and a provision authorizing the sale of lands as proposed in the leasing bill last session was eliminated. Royalties upon oil lands would be not less than 12½ per cent or more than 25 per cent upon production, while phosphates, the royalty would be two per cent of the gross value of production and one-eighth of production for sodium.

The bill prohibits aliens by stockownership or otherwise, from owning any interest in leases obtained under the bill except where discretionary power is given the president if in his opinion he deems it necessary to take over and operate the leases or acquire the products of the land involved.

"My trouble first started on my arms like heat bumps, but grew larger until they seemed to stop growing and turned red and hard and afterwards festered and scaled. "Then I sent for a free sample of Cuticura. It seemed to do good so I bought more, and I used only four cakes of Soap with the Cuticura Ointment when I was healed." (Signed) J. H. Mines, Titan, Tenn.

ON TRIAL FOR MURDER OF HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW

Greenville, S. C., September 3.—A special plea of insanity was entered today at the beginning of the trial for murder of H. T. Bramlett, building contractor, who shot and killed his mother-in-law, Mrs. L. C. McHugh, and seriously wounded his sister-in-law, Miss Leora McHugh.

Bramlett on the evening of May 31 last drove up to the home of his mother-in-law, where his wife was staying, and, it is alleged, opened fire on Mrs. McHugh and her daughter. He fired upon Sheriff Hendrix Rector, when overtaken after being pursued nine miles, and in turn was wounded by the officer and captured.

EDWARDS INDORSES DIXIE COTTON DRIVE

Former Georgia Congressman Charter Member of American Association.

Charter memberships in the Georgia division of the American Cotton association are coming in big bunches, according to Secretary-Treasurer J. A. Davis, who on Wednesday announced that every letter save one in the entire day's mail contained a check for a hundred dollars to cover such a membership.

Among the number was one from Charles G. Edwards, president of the Savannah Board of Trade, formerly for many years congressman from the first Georgia district. In the letter accompanying the check, Mr. Edwards endorsed the movement in emphatic terms.

"Permit me to say that I am convinced that the movement is on the right line," he says, "and that it will help and protect the cotton growers and cotton owners of the south. I am in favor of any movement that will eliminate the unfair manipulation of cotton prices that depresses them and hampers the great industry of the southland. This is a task we must keep at.

"Cotton has not for many years had a square deal in the markets of the world because of illegitimate speculations and the methods that have tended to manipulation instead of cotton selling for its value or anything like it. The price for a long time has not been based on supply and demand. Whether the price is high or low, it should be an honest price, based upon values; but that condition will never be reached until cotton manipulators are uprooted by a large and concrete movement on the part of our southern people to protect their greatest industry."

CAPITOL GOSSIP

Chatham Sends Digest.

Chatham county's digest for 1919 was received by Tax Commissioner H. G. Fullbright Wednesday and shows an increase of $2,828,805 over the digest of that county in 1918. Total amount of property returned in Chatham county this year was $51,937,929. With six counties yet to return the digests, the increase in taxable property for the state of Georgia for the year is $53,383,829, which shows an unprecedented state of pr prosperity for Georgia.

Inheritance Taxes.

An inheritance tax amounting to $3,840 was received Thursday from Chatham county by Comptroller General W. A. Wright. The tax was levied on the estate of the late Morton F. Plant, of Savannah. Mr. Plant left an estate valued at $32,000,000, but only property valued at half million came under the jurisdiction of the state of Georgia.

Requisition Is Issued.

Governor Dorsey Thursday issued a requisition on the governor of Alabama for Lee O. F. O'Connor, who is accused in Bibb county of cheating and swindling.

Walker Back From Tour.

Clifford Walker, attorney general for Georgia, returned to Atlanta Wednesday after spending several weeks touring the northeast and middle part of the state in the interest of his candidacy for governor. While on the trip Mr. Walker made several addresses and stated Wednesday that several members of the legislature whose support was recently claimed by another candidate have promised him their support.

Tax Declared Unreasonable.

In a decision handed down Wednesday in the supreme court of Georgia, it is held that a license tax of $100 per year levied by the city of Fitzgerald on the Western Union Telegraph company is excessive, unreasonable and confiscatory. The case came up from Ben Hill county. After the tax was levied by the city of Fitzgerald the Western Union filed an injunction in the Ben Hill superior court to restrain the city from collecting the tax. The injunction was denied and the company appealed the case to the supreme court, where the decision of the Ben Hill judge was reversed.

The new highway commission, recently created by legislature, will hold its first session Thursday morning, in the office of Governor Dorsey, when the three members will be sworn in and plans for the coming year mapped out. At this meeting a highway engineer will be elected, who shall give his entire time to the work of the highway commission. Much interest centers in the plans of the commission, which will be announced following the meeting. Professor C. M. Strahan was named chairman of the commission by Governor Dorsey.

COMMANDER READ UNABLE TO ACCEPT LOCAL INVITATION

Atlantans, who had anticipated seeng and entertaining Lieutenant Commander A. C. Read on his trip south in October with his famous flying boat, the NC-4, will have to forego this pleasure, for he has had to decline Atlanta's invitation extended through the Chamber of Commerce.

Closing his cordial letter the aerial Columbus says, "I am sorry I cannot come, particularly because of Atlanta's reputation for hospitality."

Charleston and Jacksonville are the nearest ports included in the itinerary. Just what dates he will alignt in those two harbors is not as yet known.

Governor Is Notified Government Supplies Will Be Ready Soon

Governor Hugh M. Dorsey was notified by wire Wednesday that large stores of poultry, pork, mutton and evaporated fruit now held in cold storage by the government, will be available for sale to municipalities within the near future for sale to consumers. The message was sent, the wire stated, that the governor might make plans to handle the goods quickly when they were released.

Mrs. Hayes Is Named Chaperon of Forrest Cavalry at Reunion

Mrs. Jack Hayes, wife of Colonel Jack Hayes, depot quartermaster of the Atlanta supply zone, has been named chaperon of the Forrest Cavalry Corps, which will be commanded by General W. A. Collier, of Memphis, Tenn. Mrs. Hayes is one of the most popular army woman stationed in Atlanta. She is quite wellknown in army society, having lived in the Phillipines and Honolulu where Colonel Hayes was stationed.

POPULAR SELECTIONS ON EDISON RECORDS

Popular selections, including classical numbers, songs from Broadway and latest dance hits, are found in the September list of Edison records.

Three of the world's greatest composers, Bach, Beethoven and Handel, are represented in the violin selections, "Air for the G String," "Minuet in G," and "Largo-Xerxes," which are played by the new Edison artist, Joel Belov.

The list of popular selections, fresh from Broadway, is unusually complete. Some of them are "Don't Cry, Frenchy, Don't Cry," sung by George Wilton Ballard "Don't Forget the Salvation Army," rendered by Arthur Fields; "Everybody Wants a Key to My Cellar," by Al Bernard; "Turkestan," given by the Premier quartet, and "Oh, Lawdy," sung by Ada Jones.

The Edison list of dance numbers is also down to date. The Tuxedo dance orchestra, which sing as well as play, give two popular favorites, "Mary" and "Tears," both fox trots; Lenzberg's celebrated Riverside orchestra have also two numbers, "In My Daddy's Arms" and "Razzle Dazzle." The list is completed by a musical novelty, "Jazzola," which is vocal super-jazz.

The vogue of heart songs which always follows a great war is exemplified in two remarkable duets, Eyes That Say I Love You," sung by Helen Clark and George Wilton Ballard, and "Call of the Cosy Little Home," sung by Leola Lucey and Charles Hart.

Irving and Jack Kaufman fairly make you want to quit your job and go to the sunny south when they sing "When the Bees Make Honey Down in Sunny Alabam'."

ADVENTISTS HOLD CONVENTION HERE IN CITY OF TENTS

A novelty in camp meetings is offered at Edgewood in the nature of the tented city now accommodating the nineteenth conference of the Seventh Day Adventists in Georgia. There are a number of tents occupied by families, a big one for the chautauqua tent and one for meals.

At first it looks like a military encampment, but the sight of many little tots playing around soon gives it a different appearance. In one respect, however, the camp is military, because at reveille at 5 o'clock in the morning, everybody is up and getting ready for a 6 o'clock service. Two services are conducted, one for the older persons and one for the younger set.

In the big dining tent, well screened and cared for, the meals are served in cafeteria style over a big white counter. A meal ticket costs $3 and two will be sufficient for the week. Only vegetable dishes are served, not because the sect prohibits meat, although they discouage it.

Furnishings such as mattresses, cots and the like, are provided at a nominal cost, and although the Adventists are at Lakewood primarily for the religious service, still they are physically and economically benefited. Many Atlanta Adventists have gone into camp for the meeting.

The meeting started Monday, services being conducted by some of the most prominent men of the denomination in the country.. Lectures and sermons are delivered each day, a number specially arranged for the children and younger members of the families. The meeting will come to a close Sunday night.

The speakers discuss many religious and economic problems of the day, and explain their own beliefs, notable among which is their claim that Saturday is the seventh day, and, therefore, the rightful Sabbath.

$16,800 DISBURSED BY MASONS' ANNUITY

The Masons' Annuity, a prosperous home insurance organization founded upon a humane and benevolent basis, announces that it is now disbursing $16,800 annually to the widows and orphans of Masons in Atlanta alone.

"This is only a small amount of the total being paid out over Georgia and the entire country," said Robert E. Edwards, secretary of the order, in an interview yesterday "We are paying out over $200,000 annually to Masons and their widows and orphans over the entire United States."

"The Masons' Annuity Insurance order was started in 1898 without capital stock," continued Mr. Edwards, "and the assets of over one million dollars today represent the accumulated fund in trust for the beneficiaries of the certificate holders. None of this is capital on which dividends must be paid, nor are there any high-salaried officials connected with this order, for the Masons' Annuity is not a commercial organization, but rather an order to provide means whereby Masons may as economically as possible provide for the future safety and comfort of their dependents."

Mr. Edwards stated that it was probably a coincidence that the government's war risk insurance plan for soldiers resembled very closely the Masons' Annuity plan of insurance payments, whereby the beneficiaries receive quarterly allotments for their support rather than a lump sum that might be misused.

Several prominent Atlantans, all Masons, of course, appear among the Masons' Annuity officers and directors, who are: Daniel A. Greene, Birmingham, president; Robert W. Woodruff, Atlanta, vice president; Robert E. Edwards, Atlanta, secretary. Directors: Daniel A. Greene, Birmingham; Robert W. Woodruff, Atlanta; O. L. McKay, Memphis; John Aldredge, Atlanta; George A. Treadwell, New Orleans; Joseph S. Kennedy, Atlanta; M. Ernest Geer, Douglasville, Ga.

Why Women are Thronging to See the Charming New Designs in Metal Beds by Simmons Company

NO woman needs to hear the advantages of the metal bed over wooden beds explained to her—nor does she need to be told how badly the old-style metal beds look in the room.

The bare announcement a short time ago that Simmons Company had at last achieved truly good design in metal beds was enough to throng the prominent stores where these beautiful beds are being shown.

IT will interest you to know that this achievement of Simmons Company is something a good bit broader than even the matter of line and form and composition.

It involves a fundamental invention of great practical importance—the invention of the first truly seamless tubing ever produced for metal beds.

Even a clever designer can produce little with the old-style tubing but the outworn mechanical designs. The old tubing has a seam running the full length. It is apt to be rough—does not take the enamel smoothly.

But this Seamless Steel Tubing—exclusive Simmons idea and property!

Here is a tubing square and trim. A tubing truly free from seam, split, pit or rough spot. A tubing that works kindly into shape. A tubing that finishes smooth and takes the enamel in one even, unbroken coat all over—free from chance of scratch, check or chip.

All these new Simmons designs are made with the Simmons Seamless Steel Tubing.

Illustrated below is a Twin Pair of the "Plymouth", a design that goes beautifully either with strictly Period furniture or the pleasant livable atmosphere of the typical "homey" bedroom.

You will find these fine new Simmons designs in Beds Built for Sleep in the leading stores. Quiet beds, with the Simmons Pressed Steel Corner Locks—free from squeak or rattle.

Your choice of many different patterns—and of Twin Pairs and Double Width in each pattern. Enameled in accepted Decorative Colors, and in Mahogany, Oak and Circassian Walnut.

Simmons Springs, too—

The Slumber King—a spring composed of flexible steel strips with spirals of high-test spring wire, so combined that the spring action is equal in all directions.

The Mount Vernon—the Simmons improvement on the box-spring idea.

PRICES of Simmons Beds are little if any higher than those of ordinary Beds.

If you have any trouble in finding them, a post card to us will bring you the names of Simmons merchants near your home.

ORGANIZING COTTON.

Next Monday and Tuesday the American Cotton association will meet in conference in New Orleans.

For years we have heard the cry voiced from every section of the cotton belt demanding organized action to solve the problem of the scientific marketing of the cotton crop.

There has been a universal recognition of the vital and extreme need for such an organization, but somehow, as is so often the case in matters of paramount importance, the years passed into decades without the crystallization of the desire into realization.

The American Cotton association is the belated answer to this meritorious demand.

Upon the prosperity of the cotton growers depends the prosperity of every business interest in the south.

Farmers, merchants, bankers, business and professional men of the south should answer the summons of the governors of the eleven principal cotton states to the New Orleans conference.

Adequate response to this call will make of the American Cotton association a living, breathing, vital force for the welfare of the south.

The hour has struck and the issue is action.

For half a century the market price of cotton has been regulated largely by conditions prevailing at the period when the crop is harvested.

Millions of bales thrown upon the market at once of course depressed the price; but for all these years most of the crop has been sold under this condition, the system demanding the sacrifice.

Flood the market with any commodity and the sale value drops accordingly. Under this condition the cotton buyer has largely dictated the price, and the cotton grower had to accept the terms.

Under the plan proposed by the association the cotton holder will be in a position to name a fair price, and should the buyer be unwilling to meet it the farmer can hold until the buyer is ready to meet him on a basis that will allow a just return.

In the matter of distributing the sale of cotton throughout the year, at the same time enabling the grower to meet his accruing obligations, the south has much to learn from the grain elevator system of the west, under which the grain is stored and held for sale and distribution as required. In the meantime he operates upon his storage certificates which are as good as gold.

The warehouse system of the cotton belt is steadily extending—but the work has just begun.

It is to further this work and to give organized attention to the many other things that can be done to stabilize the value of the cotton crop, and to hold its price level at its real worth that the American Cotton association was organized.

The possibilities of this association, if backed by the cotton growers and the business interests of the south, are practically unlimited. But both the cotton growers and the business interests must support it to make it a success.

And it is of just as much importance to business men and bankers as it is to the men who make the cotton, for, after all, the real basis of the prosperity of this section is cotton, and the measure of general prosperity is that of the producer of the great staple which is the foundation of our whole business fabric.

So every interest should be represented in New Orleans next week.

No more important meeting was ever held in the south.

HOMES FOR VETERANS.

Atlanta should give both a prompt and hearty response to the appeal for homes for the Confederate Veterans who will be here for the annual reunion in October.

This is perhaps the last call that will ever be made upon the citizens of Atlanta for this service. Heretofore quick and generous response has been made to appeals of this nature, and Atlanta is better able today, from every viewpoint, to render this service than ever before in her history.

A listing of only 400 beds for this occasion, when there are around 10,000 veterans coming for the October reunion, is somewhat discouraging; but it will be recalled that similar discouragement was met when it was first sought to collect the fund needed for their proper entertainment.

That Atlanta will meet the emergency will not be questioned. She has never yet failed to do so. While the drive for homes will not be continued, those willing to entertain some of them for the two or three days they will be here, will not be deprived of the opportunity to list their names and addresses at reunion headquarters, 602 Chamber of Commerce building.

While it may become necessary to accommodate the overflow in the Auditorium, in tents, or through other ample provision which the committees will make, there is unquestionably room for several thousands of them in Atlanta homes, and it cannot be doubted these will be opened to them.

As Atlantans appreciate in full the exigencies of the situation, it will be met and taken care of in the splendid way that Atlanta has always done it.

CAN'T BE BOTH.

The charge is now made by Senator Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey, on the floor of the United States senate, that Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer is pro-German.

It will be readily recalled that Mr. Palmer's confirmation was long held up, a fact which was intimated in the press throughout the country to have been due to strong, underground German influences exerted because of Mr. Palmer's activities as alien property custodian.

Both of these statements cannot be true.

It should be significant that Mr. Palmer, backed by the confidence of those who are most vigorously anti-Prussian, has won out at every point, and despite the determined opposition to his confirmation led by Senator Frelinghuysen.

As between the two statements, the public will, doubtless, have little difficulty in making the selection.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

More concerns are advertising more products today than ever before in the history of the world.

It is not because there are more markets—more consumers; it is chiefly because of the proven force of advertising in bringing to the consumer his wants and needs. The world is more wide awake to its power than it was even a year or two ago.

People read advertisements today more than ever before, for two reasons: The average advertisement, prepared by an expert, is well written, brief, carries a point and is as interesting as any piece of literature. And, in the next place, it saves them time and worry by enabling them to shop expeditiously and satisfactorily.

"Shop first in The Constitution" is good advice which has benefited many a consumer in Atlanta and its vicinity. What they want and where to get it, is time-saving information. The very fact that it is advertised in The Constitution is assurance of good value.

Advertising, too, is a labor-saving device to the manufacturer and the merchant. Every copy of The Constitution is a traveling salesman, carrying his well-put and carefully-reasoned message to prospective buyers and consumers. Covering a vast territory simultaneously, it is both the cheapest and quickest of selling forces.

In keeping alive the keenest of competition, in saving the time of the consumer, and in reducing the marketing costs to the producer, advertising is proving a possible vital force in reducing the cost of living.

It is to every consumer's advantage to read the advertisements in The Constitution every day. They offer pleasant and instructive reading. But, more than that, as a money-saving and a time-saving proposition they offer opportunities you cannot afford to ignore.

To get what you want, reasonably priced and in the shortest possible time:

"Shop first in The Constitution."

We are promised photographs of two new comets, but what's of more interest now is to keep this old earth running right.

British Soldier's Job Gone Forever

By NEWELL DWIGHT HILLIS

Dr. Hillis.

Just now Great Britain is like unto a volcano, boiling and seething, with heated impulses, that are like unto lurid lava. It could scarcely be otherwise. More than one million British soldiers have returned home to find themselves without a job. For years they were in the trenches of France and Belgium. There, their companions fell; and there, through overwork, they left much that was best of their lives. Now they are back in England, asking to have their jobs back again, and though Great Britain loves her sons, she is helpless to find the jobs. The explanation is simple. Great Britain produced more wealth in 1918 with six millions of men at war, than she did in 1913, with every man at his job. What is the explanation? It is this: The new tool, often an American tool, is doing the work of five and ten men. The tool costs little and the human machine much. The old tools of 1913 are on the scrap pile. The new tools cannot be thrown out to give a job to these men. The new tool that costs three dollars a day produces ten times the amount produced by a workmen paid three dollars a day. To throw out the tools would ruin England industrially. Today Great Britain stands midway between the devil and the deep sea. The presence of more than a million men in England, attacking the motherland because Great Britain will not give them a job, threatens England with Bolshevism. What can be done in this crisis? Is the one question that is upon the lips of every thoughtful Britisher.

What England is doing as a makeshift is this: She is paying the war wage to the soldiers, supporting them in her military camps, paying out each week sixty-five millions of dollars, through a desire to keep faith with the returned soldier, and at the same time produce wealth enough through machinery to pay her enormous debts. Now comes a new plan. A little group of greater empire Britishers are visiting the United States and Canada. Apparently they are here as private citizens, seeking recreation and health through travel. It may be, however, that they are also here to find out what proportion of their one million soldiers in Britain for whom there is no job, can be absorbed by the wheatlands of Manitoba, the forest lands of British Colombia, the lumber camps of the Puget Sound, the grazing lands of the Rocky mountain region. They have now found out the carrying capacity of the ocean steamers for the next fall and winter; they are also trying to discover what is the carrying capacity of the railways of Canada and the United States. The questions they are asking are questions like these: How many of our Britishers can the American farm absorb? How many homesteads for new settlers are there in western Canada? Are the English and Scotch people fitted for the lumber camps, the saw mills, for the apple orchards in the irrigated sections? For how many months will the British government have to support these immigrants in their new homes, at the rate of sixty-five millions of dollars per month? It is a great problem, but Britain must find the solution herein.

All this represents a new thing in American life. During the last fifty years our immigrants have been from central and southern Europe. The Russians, Poles, Germans, Bohemians have come by the ten thousands, and so have the Italians, the Greeks and the Armenians. At first the new settlers were almost entirely English; they gave the language to the new republic. Because they outnumbered all the other races together, they made our institutions to be chiefly British. They gave us our literature, our stamp of science and religion. Our political thinking is English thinking, and our philosophy is English philosophy. All our institutions are Saxon institutions. Then came a long period when Britishers went to their own colonies—Canada, Australia, India, South Africa. Now, suddenly, everything is changed. The streams from south Europe have dried up; but the human currents from Britain are turned once more toward this country. It is quite possible that the coming of this great company from Britain will mark a new era of prosperity and growth, not only for the Dominion of Canada, but for the people of the United States.

Needless to say, however, it has never attempted to exercise the privilege.

Capital and Labor Join To Down Reds in Seattle

By Carl W. Ackerman.

Seattle, Wash., September 3.—The Seattle of today and the Seattle of February, when the Bolshevists directed a two-day general strike, are two different cities. There has been a complete transformation since the "soviet days." I was in Seattle during a part of the general strike and I have been here three days on this visit talking to the business men, labor leaders and "reds." In contrast with the wild days of last winter Seattle today is one of the healthiest cities, as far as a labor or industrial crisis is concerned, that I have visited. The fear, curiosity, apprehension and uncertainty of February have given way to cooperation between employer and employee and their confidence in the public is returned by the reliance which the people generally is placing in the activities of city officials, the chamber of commerce and the leaderse of capital and labor.

This does not mean that there are radicals of the I. W. W. following left in Seattle. There are lots of them. By htat I mean that as I look out of my hotel window I see several hundred gathered in a vacant lot, listening to a Seattle dentist talk Bolshevism. He does that every Sunday, but Green, the strike leader, has left, taking $30,000 worth of union funds with him. Duncan, the union labor man who helped, is still here and so are several hundred others, but they have lost the confidence of the great majority of the working people of Seattle and they represent only a discontented minority with their former power of leadership gone.

Labor Fighting the Reds.

The secret of the whole situation and of the change which has taken place is in the determination of union labor leaders and employers that the Bolshevists are enemies of both. And, in this city, both labor and capital are fighting the reds. Seattle learned this lesson during the strike and every day this seaport is profiting by it. The phrase "business as usual" might be applied to eSattle today when it would not fit any other American city I have been in. But by "business as usual" I mean that Seattle is forging ahead, industrially and economically, with the chamber of commerce, acting for the public, bringing about an understanding between employers and employees, with the object of eliminating the necessity for strikes. Seattle is ambitious to be the New York of the west and has passed the beginning stage. Ships carrying cargoes worth millions of dollars arrive and depart from this port every day. Like ceaseless shuttles they are helping to make Seattle great and employer and employees, recognizing the vast possibilities for the city during this period of reconstruction, are making a serious attempt to get down to business. Except for a printers' strike and threatened strikes by the milk drivers and building trades nothing more serious is disturbing Seattle. But these will probably be compromised, as are labor disagreements all over the country, by concessions to labor.

There is, of course, among some business men the belief that when a strike is called they ought to close down their business and starve employees into submission. Among some laboring men, particularly those around the ship yards and docks, there is a feeling that everything belongs to labor and they ought "by right" to have it. Not long ago the longshoremen demanded 25 per cent of the stock in the steamship companies where they were employed, but they accepted a wage increase and went back to work. Two weeks ago some of the radicals carried bricks to the roofs of several downtown buildings and were going to stone the police because of alleged interference with their radical plans, but Ole Hanson, who was then mayor, mobilized the street sprinkling wagons in the neighborhood, kept the streets wet all day, ordered policemen to ride up and down on motorcycles and had two hundred other police in reserve. Those woh were attempting a demonstration could not gather on the streets because of the sprinklers and motorcycle men and they never got to the tops of the buildings to throw their bricks because policemen were on other buildings with automatic rifles.

This would seem to indicate that there was still some radical groups at work in Seattle to cause trouble. There are but the important fact is that their number is constantly decreasing: the city administration, under Mayor Fitzgerald, as under Hanson, has limitless courage and determination and the recognized leaders of labor and the employers are getting together in an effort to stop all of the trouble-makers. Great strides have been made since February and still greater progress will be made in the near future unless industry and transportation are tied up generally through the country, but no one in Seattle, who is an American citizen wants this. Business men have told me they could tie up almost any line of activity if they wanted to by simply closing their doors when a strike is threatened, but, contrary to the beliefs of many business men in other cities, they claim that a tie-up will be the worst possible occurrence in as much as it would destroy all possibilities of co-operation between employer and employee and probably precipitate direct action in the city and nation.

By keeping the wheels ofindustry turning and by getting together to discuss plans, wages, hours of work, conditions of employment and production, both employers and the leaders of union labor hope to solve the industrial and labor troubles of Seattle.

Good Beginning Made.

That they are making a good beginning was evident at a meeting in the chamber of commerce yesterday afternoon. When I informed the executive secretary of the chamber that I was making an investigation for The Constitution they called an informal meeting of the secretaries of the various bureaus of the chamber and invited A. F. Haines, vice president of the Pacific Steamship company, a vice president of the chamber and a recognized leader among employers, and William Short, president of the State Federation of Labor, to come and join in a discussion of conditions in Seattle. Haines is a type of business man who sees a new era coming and who is preparing for it. Short is a dynamic young miner woh was elected president of the State Federation of Labor last June because of his uncompromising opposition to the reds.

"It is time for the employer, consumer, labor leader and property owner to defeat the radicals. That must be done immediately. They are the enemis of both employer and employee," said Mr. aHines, "because their power, if carried to the logical end, means the destruction of worker, employer, property and civilization. But the situation here is getting better every day. Every day since the strike there has been a general improvement. The employees are recognizing the sane leaders of union labor and they are as anxious to get rid of the reds as we are.

"There are, of course, two classes of employers here as everywhere else. There is the progressive business man woh believes everything can be worked out satisfactorily by co-operation. There is another class who say, 'Let them have a revolution if they want it,' but in Seattle this class is in the minority because most of our business men are of the opinion that if we keep on going we shall solve our problem without destruction.

Eruption Cleaned Blood.

Short nodded his head. "The eruption last February cleanesd the blood of Seattle," he began. "Ther is, of course, a natural desire on the part of all classes to bring about better conditions and a better world. There is a strong natural desire among employees to move forward and when a change is underway there is always an eruption, but the fact that a mistake was mad ehere in February brought home to the employees that they had adopted the wrong course. The greatest cure of the general strike was the general strike itself. The natural processes of evolution can be aided by education and the capacity for organization, but no group of people can change overnight. In the labor groups of Seattle the progressive elements have broken with the destructive elements. A large majority of employees understand the situation and are ready to meet us in order to bring about the necessary changes by evolution, not revolution. By doing this you win the constructive, educated elements of labor which give you the basis for labor unions."

"What are you going to do to get back to production?" Mr. aHines asked.

"That will adjust itself if you adjust the high cost of living," Short repljied. "The majority of working men do not receive more than $6 a day and can't live on that."

"But that is because the production is way below normal," interjected Mr. Haines. "A worker one year ago produced twice, in some instances four times as much as he does today, but today his wages are more than double. We must increase production and if that is accomplished the high cost of living will automatically drop."

Short interrupted to point out why the working men were dissatisfied. "The fact that he reads in the newspapers that the number of millionaires has increased tenfold during the war; that he reads about the enormous profits of the packers, gets the idea into his mind that he is being imposed upon; that he is an object of the profiteers. That conviction causes rebellion because the workers believe they are being imposed upon by employers and for this they don't see the necessity for increasing production."

Capital and Labor Get Together.

These were but a few of the ideas advanced during the discussion between the employer and the leader of the organized employees of the state. Neithr attempted to settle the problem, but the encouraging factor which was so evident here and generally in Seattle is that employers and employees are getting together and exchanging ideas and both believe that as a result of their frequent meetings a solution will be found for the grave problems of capital, industry, management and labor which confront Seattle today. The chamber of commerce is the connecting link. Laboring men and their leader are as welcome in his organization as the employers who are members. The chamber has appointed a labor relations committee to bring about co-operation and the committee, through its chairman, has already planned its work far in advance. Both employers and employees are giving this committee their assistance as, the secretary of the committee remarked:

"I am not afraid to go into the labor temple now because they treat me like a human being," and the working man feels the same about the chamber of commerce.

Seattle, which had the first general strike in this country, is apparently taking the lead among large industria cities, in bringing capital and labor together, in uniting American citizens upon an American program of industrial peace.

"It will take another year to settle these problems," said Mr. Haines. "Five years," says Ole Hanson, but whether it is one or five the important thing is that Seattle is starting out on a foundation of good mutual will.

MOUNTAINEERS AND EDUCATION

(From The Portland Oregonian.)

Sergeant Alvin T. York, sometimes called "the greatest hero of them all," because he killed and captured an almost incredible number of boches on the battlefield, has announced his intention to set out on a lecture tour for the purpose of raising funds for the establishment of a university for the mountain people of his home state—Tennessee. The fact is significant of the awakening of interest in education among a dormant people, rather than of the wisdom of the particular plan which Sergeant York may have in mind. It will be doubted that the mountaineers need a "university" in the popular sense of the word as much as they need an efficient system of primary schools. And the thing needed most of all in cases of this kind, as was suggested in a survey made by the Rockefeller general board, is the will to establish their own schools. The genius of our system of public education is public participation in it.

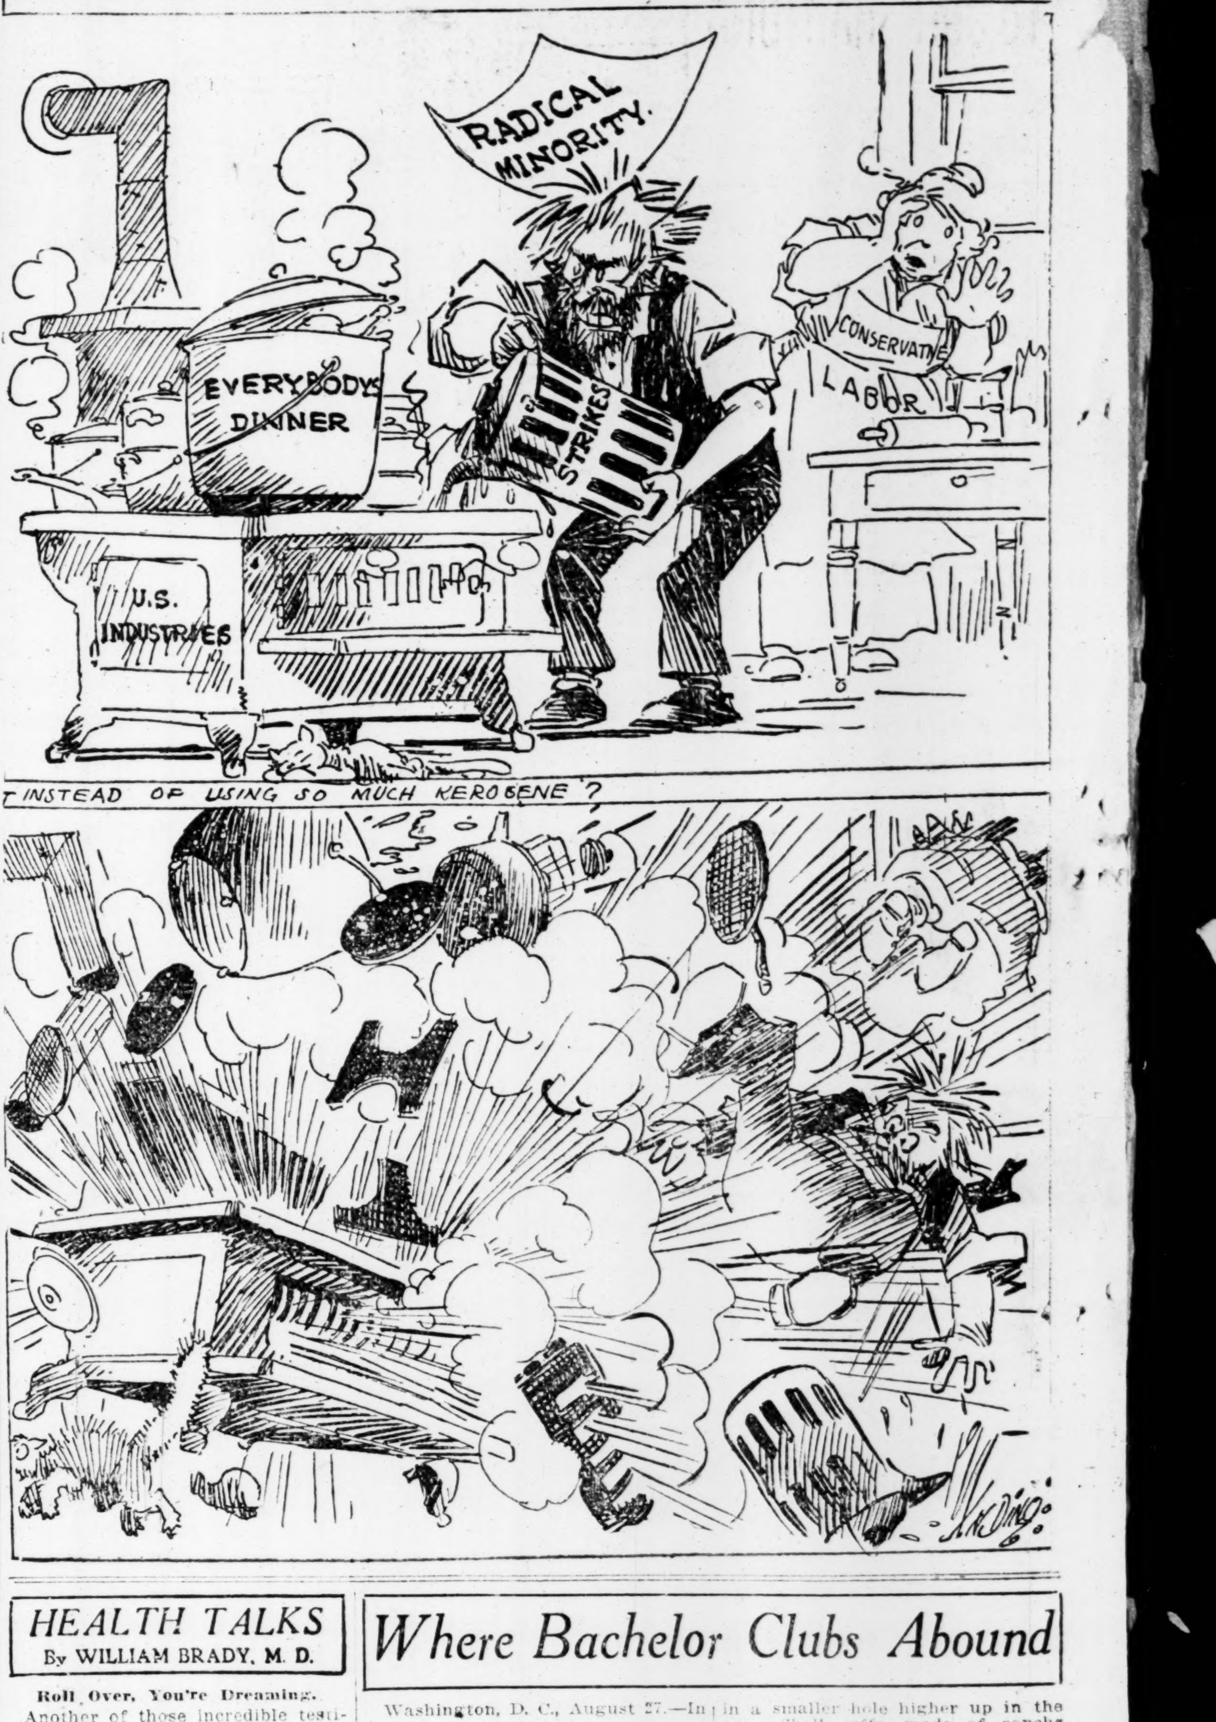
Yet it will be surmised, from the fact that Sergeant York is not canvassing among millionaires, but is modestly attempting to raise the necessary funds for a beginning out of the proceeds of his lectures, that he is not laboring under illusions on this score. Money spent in making a beginning will be spent from the public point of view. Thereafter, for their own good, the mountaineers ought to look out for themselves, which no doubt they will do when the way has been pointed out to them. They possess in high degree the characteristics of self-reliance and singleness of purpose and are quite likely to accomplish that which they set out to do.

The section from which Sergeant York hails is one of the most typically American in the United States, yet its percentage of illiteracy is high. This is due to its past isolation and its poverty of material resources. Not only do the limited vocabularies of the mountain folk contain many now obsolete words which were current in the time of Chaucer, but their mode of living is nearly as archaic. They have not kept up with the procession of civilization, although the fault has not been wholly their own.

Now the war has awakened in them new aspirations. Their young men who served in the army have returned utterly dissatisfied with the old ways. It is the discontent of enlightenment and it ought not to be suppressed. Many of them will not stay in the mountains, but will join the rush to the cities, as many other country boys have done. But it is everlastingly to the credit of Sergeant York that he has elected to remain with his people, to fight their battles for them, to awaken further the desire for education, to improve their condition where they are rather than incite them to emigration. Sergeant York is fired with the spirit of the missionary, and will find his highest destiny in labor among people he knows so well.

Details of the system proposed by him are unimportant by comparison with the fundamental fact that the mountaineers are becoming aware of their own shortcomings. They will not require much outside help once they have made their start. There are great possibilities in this American giant, just awakening from his slumber in the southern hills.

Wouldn't It Be Better to Split a Little More Kindling Wood



HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Roll Over, You're Dreaming.

Another of those incredible testimonials:

"You no doubt receive a lot of letters telling of the great benefits derived from somersaults. In that connection I will only say that after several months of close application I have found other benefits than those anticipated. I had been a sufferer for years with varicocele which caused much discomfort at intervals two or three times a month. A constipated habit aggravated the condition. But since taking twenty-five or thirty of your famous 'rolls' every day I have not once suffered from that trouble. I knew others similarly afflicted, told them of the 'rolls,' and they started turning, and were cured! One case in particular, a traffic officer, who said he had read your 'dope,' as he called it, but he had no faith in it. When I told him of my results he decided to try it. The result, he says, is magical. Many thanks for the good advice. Keep up your work, and more power to your typewriter! I am 49, never was seriously ill except influenza last winter, have never used tobacco or intoxicants." (L. D. M. G.)

Well, now, what do you know about that? Some one will discover that somersaults are a sovereign remedy for banko blancis insufficiencis one of these days.

Still, taking them all around, up and over, these rolls are certainly a great help to digestion. I wish I could devise some method of concentrating the somersaults into three-grain capsules. Think of the fine line of testimonials I'd have all ready to start business with! Everything cured from cold feet to chronic grouch—sallow complexions brightened while you roll, constipation cured without a physic, poor circulation renewed at small expense, step right in and have your splanchnic pool stirred up, this is the place where we put stagnant blood back into circulation—six capsules for a dollar.

Adventurers contemplating a fling at this method should be warned that the minimum effective dose is six rolls each night and morning, on the floor, and after the first few experiments, at least no pillows or other padding should be required, an ordinary rug or bare floor being enough to roll on. If any reader is so timid as to fear the first roll, we have a special monograph embodying minute instructions, copy of which will be mailed on receipt of a self-addressed, 2-cent-stamped envelope.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Condiment as Medicine.

I suffer with a distressing feeling after my meals and have been advised to take one grain of cayenne pepper in capsule after each meal. Would this be harmful in any way? (I. A.)

ANSWER—No. Many sprinkle several grains over their food at every meal.

Raw Rolled Oats and Wheat.

Do you approve of eating raw rolled oats and wheat, if one craves them? (M. F. O.)

ANSWER—Yes.

Tansy Habit.

I have never missed one of your interesting health talks. I am 71 years of age and in the best of health and actively engaged in my law practice. In suspending the use of tobacco I acquired the habit of chewing the weed tansy, and I am inclined to think it may be injurious by tending to suppress the elimination of urine. Kindly advise me about that. (R. V. N.)

ANSWER—Tansy is an irritant to the kidneys and would be harmful for that reason.

Another Dangerous Visitor.

A lady advises the use of ten drops of turpentine in warm water as in injection to relieve constipation and gas. Is there any danger of using this as a daily routine?

ANSWER—Yes, it would set up inflammation. Internal physics are less injurious than the habitual resort to the unnatural action of an injection.

Eminent Nurse.

I am informed by an eminent nurse that an average sized slice of bread toasted and buttered contains more nourishment than a hen's egg. Is that true? (E. L.)

ANSWER—YES.

Dr. Brady will answer all signed letters pertaining to health. Writers' names are never printed. Only inquiries of general interest are answered in this column but all letters will be answered by mail if written in ink and a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Requests for diagnosis or treatment of individual cases cannot be considered. Address Dr. William Brady, in care of The Constitution.

Where Bachelor Clubs Abound

Washington, D. C., August 27.—In connection with the announcement by President Wilson that the Island of Yap may be acquired by the United States as a reparation for the sinking of the Lusitania and as a wireless or cable station, the following bulletin is issued by the National Geographic society:

"Yap, the westernmost of the Western Caroline islands, is situated about 500 miles southwest of Guam and 800 miles east of the Island of Mindanao, of the Philippine group. It has a population of about seven thousand, and was the administrative center for the Western Carolines, the Pelew and the Ladrone islands. The Germans had made plans to locate a wireless station there; but were prevented when Australian troops captured the islands in October, 1914.

"Yap is strangely old and strangely up to date. Iits inhabitants are still in the stone age of progress and copra is almost the only export, but there are features in their lives that seem as ultra-modern as the latest socialist doctrines.

Dress Suits Rented.

"On the Island of Yap the natives are strict prohibitionists, made so by the race that made Pilsen and Munich famous. Children belong to the community, are frequently adopted or exchanged, and throw off parental control at an early age. Bachelor clubs, closed to the women, dot the islands. What corresponds to the Yap dress suit cannot be bought, but is rented to the young beau who desires to shine in society. And since food and drink and clothes all grow on trees, where anyone can secure them, the money of the island represents labor rather than any material thing. But one can better understand the meaning of the burden of wealth when one hears that a single coin of their stone money sometimes weighs hundreds of pounds.

"Yap, or Uap, when translated, means the land, and is the only land that many of the islanders know, although many a native from this island has been driven hundreds of miles away from his home and returned without chart or compass among islands where he could not speak a word of the language used. Yap is surrounded by an atoll but is itself of volcanic origin. The only good harbor is Tomil bay.

Married Man's Paradise.

"Married and unmarried men alike belong to the club which maintains a fine failu, or bachelor house, the hostess of which must be secured by force or cunning from some distant tribe. There she lives under a polyandrous system where no man becomes jealous and the wives of the village never object to their husbands' evenings at the 'club.' If one of the men eventually marries the hostess he sets up a new home for her, but the tattooed hands and legs which distinguished her as a mispil, or "queen of the club," remain to prove in her weezened old age that once she was the darling of the district. If the mispil shows a preference for any one member of the club, that member is told to seek other fields for his social graces and the party goes on without any bad feelings.

"The chief decoration of the male is a string of pink shells made into a necklace, and since no man is rich enough to own such a treasure, the best ones are loaned out for such a period as the wearer may choose to be dressed in the height of fashion. As there are no buttonholes, the man may wear two bouquets in each ear, a sort of corsage bunch in a large hole in the lower lobe and a small buttonnaire in a smaller hole higher up in the ear. Shell cuffs, made of conchs add the finishing touch to the correct attire.

"Yap women do not wear the veil. Their only dress is a voluminous skirt made of leaves or fiber and composed of four or five thicknesses. Although one month is the average life of a woman's dress and it is necessary for any one to sweep up a bundle of discarded dress goods after every female gathering, the style does not change. But this voluminous skirt has little to do with the modesty or immodesty of the wearer. What corresponds to the veil of the harem beauty in Yap is a thin cord of fiber which every woman, old or young, must wear about her neck at all times.

Monetary System.

"The 'large money' of the island consists of millstone-like disks of limestone from Babelthuap, 400 miles to the south, and one of these disks four feet in diameter is the usual price that is paid when the bachelor club abducts a new mispil. Such a piece of currency may be worth 10,000 cocoanuts.

"The 'small' change of the island is made of shells, which the natives carry strung on fiber as does the Chinaman with his cash. For external trade the cocoanut is the common standard of exchange.

"It is not necessary that the Yap Croesus should shelter his entire 'pile' in his house. He simply lets it be known that that particular half-ton piece of money belongs to him and no one steals it. On one occasion a very fine piece of money was shipwrecked in transportation and its owner is credited with the wealth it represented in that fine bank pile which is now reposing in a safety deposit vault composed of 400 feet of ocean water. When the Germans wanted to have the roads repaired they could devise no way of fining the people until they bethought themselves of 'attaching' some of these limestone pieces of currency, after which the roads were soon repaired."

JAPAN PLANNING TO QUIT SHANTUNG

According to Yosuke Matsuoka, Who Represented Japan at Paris. Conditions of Return Outlined.

New York, September 3.—Restitution of the province of Shantung to China by Japan within a year was predicted here today by Yosuke Matsuoka, secretary in the foreign department of Japan, and a member of the Japanese peace delegation. Mr. Matsuoka has just arrived here from Paris on his way to Japan.

"I should not be at all surprised," he said, 'if our government opened within a very few months, or even a few weeks, negotiations with the Chinese government with a view to settling the Shantung question in a way satisfactory to all concerned.

"To those of us who have participated in the peace conference, there is not the shadow of doubt that Japan will withdraw from Shantung at the earliest possible moment. The peace treaty requires Germany to hand over to Japan all the documents relative to Shantung within three months after the treaty comes into force. When this is done, Japan will immediately take steps toward the restitution which Japan has pledged herself to make in favor of China.

The Japanese Terms.

"The terms on which Japan will restitute Shantung are now fairly well known to the world. Briefly stated, the main points of these terms are:

"First, Japan is to restore Kiau-Chow, the German-leased territory, to China.

"Second, in returning Kiau-Chow to China, Japan in the interest of all nations asks only one thing, namely, that the territory be open to international trade. It is only as a natural corollary of this proposed measure that Japan also desires to establish an international, not a Japanese settlement, in the city of Tsing-Tao. In the Chino-Japanese agreement of May 25, 1915, a Japanese settlement was to have been established in addition to an international one, but Viscount Uchida, our foreign minister, declared on August 6, last, that Japan would waive the right to establish a Japanese settlement.

"Third, Japan will withdraw all her troop not only from the railway zone but from Tsing-Toa. After the restitution of Kia-Chow not a single Japanese soldier will be left on the soil of Shantung.

"Fourth, the Shantung railway of 270 miles will be operated not by Japan, but by a Chino-Japanese join corporation. Of course, China will participate in the management of this railway.

To Withdraw Police Force.

"Fifth, Japan will withdraw her police force from along the railroad and entrust the Chinese authorities with the policing of that region.

"Besides the matters included in the above five categories there are questions of the German submarine cables, railway loans and preferential rights with regard to the supply of capital and materials and the employment of foreigners in Shantung. I believe these questions can easily be settled.

"I do not wish to say that these will be the exact terms, but I am prepared to declare that our overture to China will be along these lines. Let me emphasize once more that these negotiations will be entered into within a very short time. The solemn pledge she (Japan) has given to China before the whole world will be carried out under all circumstances.

"Japan has taken nothing from China in Shantung, but proposes to give her much. . . . What we have taken in Shantung was taken from Germany, not China. This point cannot be too strongly emphasized."

BRITISH COAL MINERS VOTE DIRECT ACTION

London, September 3.—The coal miners in conference here today declared themselves in favor of taking a ballot on the question of direct action and resolved to vote in favor of such ballot at tomorrow's meeting of the triple alliance of the transport workers, miners and railwaymen.

The miners adopted in its entirety the recommendation of the national executive committee that the government scheme for dealing with coal miners be rejected, and decided to agitate for nationalization of the mines at the trades union congress at Glasgow on September 8.

Robert Smillie, the miners' leader, declared the miners generally were convinced that nationalization of the mines was essential in the interests of national industry and the poorer consumers.

William Brace, member of parliament for Monmouthshire and president of the South Wales Miners' federation, said that "coal is more valuable than gold."

Mr. Brace asked why the government trifled with a product so essential to the reconstruction of the nation, and asserted that the only solution of the problem was the nationalization of the mines.

GOVERNMENT TO SELL ITS FROZEN MEATS

Washington, September 3.—Five million pounds of frozen meats, now in cold storage in New York and Chicago, was offered by the war department today to municipalities for resale. The offer will remain in effect until September 25, at which time other methods of marketing such portion of the stock will be resorted to.

The meats include about 1,250,000 pounds of frozen poultry at New York and more than one million pounds in the Chicago zone. This will be sold at 32 cents a pound. Large quantities of frozen mutton and pork shoulders and loins will be offered also at from 16 to 27 cents. Since these products can only be transported in refrigerator cars, no order for less than a carload will be accepted.

Colonel Deems Cited For Gallant Service With 321st Infantry

News was received in Atlanta yesterday that Colonel Clarence Deems, Jr., has been cited for meritorious and distinguished services as commanding officer of the 321st artillery, 82d division. The citation reads "through his tireless enenergy and technical skill as an artillerist, his regiment gave most effective assistance to the infantry which it supported, furnishing at all times wholehearted co-operation in the operations against the enemy."

Clonel Deems is well known in Atlanta and had in his regiment a number of Atlanta men, who will be glad to learn that their commanding officer has received recognition for the distinguished services rendered by him.

After the fighting abroad, Colonel Deems was director and commandant of the army artillery school in France, which he organized after the brigade schools were abolished. He is at present one of six officers from the field artillery school detailed at the general staff school at Fort Leavenworth.

When he was called to organize the 321st field artillery he was editor of The Field Artillery Journal. He was first ordered into battle during the Aisne-Marne offensive, and later proceeded to the vicinity of Toul. Colonel Deems' regiment supported the right of the American line during the St. Mihiel drive, and in the Argonne successively supported the 82d and 80th divisions. The marked success of his regiment during the drives brought recognition for him from General Pershing, and three days before the signing of the armistice he was given command of the 57th field artillery brigade.

FREEBY SAYS HIS EFFORTS FAILED

"My efforts to find a medicine that would overcome my troubles failed completely till I began taking Tanlac," said Earl O. Freeby, of 705 Kenwood Parkway, Minneapolis, Minn., recently.

"About eighteen months ago," he continued, "I had a bad attack of pneumonia and for three months after getting up I was unable to do any work at all. Then I came down with the 'flu' and after being in bed for several weeks I got up again, but my system was left in a terribly weak and rundown condition. I had no appetite and the little I did eat gave me no strength or energy, and the medicines I took didn't help me any.

"I had been reading so much about Tanlac that I decided to try it and it has completely overcome my troubles and I am now so well and strong that I can put in a full day's work at my trade of gardening, and put in some time in my own garden when I get home in the evening. I have a big appetite and never enjoyed better health in my life than I do now. I have induced several of my friends to take Tanlac and all have been greatly benefited by it. I am more than glad to recommend Tanlac to anybody who is in a run-down condition."

Husbands and Wives Babies and Pet Dogs Gather at the Polls

Families Didn't Suffer in the Least, Because Every Representative Was Present When Father and Mother Cast Ballots.

By Eleanor Boykin.

"Do you feel contaminated?" I inquired of Mrs. Haynes McFadden, as she came with Mr. McFadden out of the little unfinished shop on Tenth street around the corner from Peachtree, turned for the day into a polling place for the eighth ward, after having cast her vote.

"Not a bit," she answered. "Not contaminated, nor unfeminine, nor—" but she had to leave the sentence unfinished, because she sighted her small boy starting across the street, regardless of cars, automobiles or pedestrians rushing to the polls, and she dashed off in his direction.

There were many other husbands and wives who came in and voted together, and in some instances brought the baby and the dog along besides. No family left at home to be neglected, you see.

Polls aren't the same any more; but if the men found the women and children and pets in the way they didn't say so.

The woman's vote was practically solid, the notable exception being the ninth ward, where they split on the councilmanic candidates, Robert H. Jones, Jr., and Claude E. Barnwell. It was here that the feeling was perhaps intensest on both sides, and they do say that some of the women—oh, but even men have been known to get wrought in a heated argument.

A Society Event.

If the city executive committee had issued engraved invitations they could not have made more of a society event out of the voting in precinct A, of the eighth, where women outnumbered men in wholesale quantities.

All day long well-dressed women, quite decided on how they were going to scratch their ballots, came in and out greeting friends in the manner of a reception. Over in precinct B, of the ninth ward, where the polls were held in the temporary structure of the Druid Hills Baptist church, groups of men and women stood or sat about under the trees of the churchyard, making up a scene which closely resembled a Sunday school picnic.

More of the spirit and appearance of the erstwhile primary was to be seen in the third ward, where a corner drug store made a convenient gathering place for the electioneers, who could nab the voter as he or she started to the dirty, little room where the balloting was going on.

But there was nothing rough in the crowd that kept the corner busy all afternoon and women were shown every courtesy. The men seemed amused and proud that the women should be slipping in and out the ranks of the oldtimers.

He Should Care.

"I forgot this morning whether I had voted or not," Paul Carpenter, assistant district attorney, said as he was chatting with friends who came to the church booth in the ninth. "I was standing out here and two beautiful young women came up and talked for a few minutes, and I couldn't remember whether I had already been inside or not."

Another man said: "You can't cuss around the polls now when you get excited and it sort of takes your pep."

"I am proud to be voting with you ladies," was the sentiment expressed by H. H. Cabaniss as he walked out of the eighth ward booth.

And as for the women themselves, they just fell into their new role as if it came as natural as going to housekeeping. It did worry them because they didn't know all the men on the executive committee list, and it was with difficulty that some were persuaded that they must vote on representatives from every ward if they would make their ballot valid.

Though it would be impossible to single out one woman from the city who was the very first to hand in her vote, there is certainly no one who got ahead of Mrs. Mary L. McLendon, who through her long service to the cause has been named "the mother of suffrage in Georgia."

In spite of her advanced years, she took an early jaunt over to her precinct, 93 South Pryor street, and had the honor of dropping in the first woman's ballot there.

Feel Inches Taller.

"I've been waiting for this so long," Mrs. McLendon said, "and I feel two or three inches taller because I am a citizen at last, something more than just an annex to man."

"Certainly there was no happier woman in the city than this beloved old lady, who has so patiently waited for the day of victory. "The men were so courteous," she said, "I don't think I ever liked men so well in my life."

Recalling her girlhood days in Decatur when the women often had to walk blocks out of the way to avoid passing "doggeries" where liquor was sold, Mrs. McLendon said that going to the polls Wednesday was just like going to Sunday school.

The first woman to have her name recorded on the voting list in the A precinct of the eighth ward was Mrs. Francis Kamper, who voted at the same time with her husband, always an early voter.

Mrs. Frances Smith Whiteside was the first woman to arrive at the polls, but because of a lengthy deliberation, Mrs. Kamper came ahead of her.

In the sixth ward at the Forsyth and Peachtree polls, Miss Anne Bagwell was the very first to vote, and she says that if anybody in the city tied with her, it is because they dropped in their bollot right on the dot of seven.

Miss Bagwell was one of the clerks at precinct A, and Mrs. C. A. Gerry was another there. At almost every office there were women clerks, and if the verdict of W. F. Crusselle, manager of precinct A, in the eighth ward, for about the fifteenth time, is accepted, they were best assistants the managers ever had.

Were Fine Assistants.

Helping him were Mrs. R. L. Turman and Mrs. Charles Goodman, both prominent suffragists. In the third ward, precinct A, there were three women taking part in keeping election records, Mrs. A. Allen, Mrs. Nellie Morgan and Mrs. J. F. Stainback, and they were enthusiastic over their job in spite of the fact that the large number of voters in this precinct kept them busy every minute of the twelve hours the polls were open.

The percentage of the registered women voting in the sixth ward greatly in excess of the percentage of the registered men voting. At precinct A there were seven times as many registered men as women, but only about twice as many voting.

Mrs. C. P. Ozburn was on deck all day in the third ward ready to help the women of herw ard with any voting problems. Wherever they asked for advice on the candidates Mrs. Ozburn told them frankly the men she thought best suited to represent the ward. But if they wanted help in picking out the candidates to whom she and many of the other women weer opposed, she was just as ready to give them the information.

Mrs. Beaumont Davison made a picture of the modern enfranchised, war-work type of woman, as she sat on the lawn of her precinct, knitting while she sought support for her candidates. She admitted that the knitting was camouflage, but she took many stitches just the same.

Families Come Together.

There were several instances in the eighth ward of whole families coming together to the polls. Bright and earlyl came Mrs. Porter King, with her daughter, Miss Carolyn King, and her son, Remsen P. King. Later on in the day Mrs. B. M. Blount, in company with her three daughters, Mrs. Elliott Cheatham, Mrs. Ernest Duncan and Miss Caroline Blount, visited her polls.

The oldest woman voter, so far as known, was Mrs. E. J. Prescott, 82 years old, who was accompanied to the polls by her daughter, Miss Helen Prescott.

An amusing incident occurredd in the eighth ward when Dr. Hugh Lokey, who came with Mrs. Lokey, an ardent worker for suffrage, found that he was not registered and hence was disqualified to vote. "Now, I'll get it," hesaid, reluctant to admit the truth to his wife.

Mrs. Lokey, however, smiled rather indulgently as she said when she learned the situation, "Well, he is a tolerably good man, but a poor citizen."

Other couples who came together to vote in the eighth were: Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Schlesinger, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Neely, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Jarvis, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Burnett, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Ulric Atkinson and Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Davis.

Hoffman Leads Family.

Councilman W. D. Hoffman, who was unopposed for re-election from the eighth, voted early in the day, bringing with him Mrs. Hoffman and his daughter, Mrs. Lott Warren, Jr. Another prominent voter was Miss Sally Eugenia Brown, sister of ex-Governor Joseph M. Brown, who expressed himself as being opposed to suffrage in a public letter after the executive committee had approved it.

"I never expected to live to see the women voting with us," H. M. Patterson said as he dropped in his ballot.

An old man tsrolled into precinct A, of the sixth ward, and, leaning on a stick, said with some resentment in his voice: "I have been voting 51 years, and I'm registered now and entitled to vote, but I do not expect to vote any more. I always said that whe nwomen got to voting I'd quit, and I intend to do it."

This precinct received a visit from another man who says he has stopped voting. He was Colonel J. E. Noville, who says he has not taken advantage of the ballot since 1786, when he was disgusted over the conclusion of the Hayes-Tilden controversy. The colonel was 91 years old on February 7.

Among the voters in the sixth ward were: Mrs. H. A. McLellan, a very old woman, who was quite exhausted by her trip to the polls; Mrs. H. L. Collier, Mrs. R. O. Flinn, Miss Maimie Pitts, and Mrs. W. B. Griffith with her daughters, Miss Mary Butts Griffith, Mrs. Walter Bedard and Mrs. W. B. Griffith.

COAL SHORTAGE PERIL TO ITALIAN FINANCE

Industry Is Seriously Hampered and Nation's Position Critical.

(The Constitution—Philadelphia Public Ledger Service—Copyright, 1919.)

Washington, September 3.—An official report on the coal shortage in Italy obtained here today says that the question of the supply of coal necessary to meet the requirements of the country continues to cause grave anxiety. Italy had to reduce her coal imports during the war by 54 per cent and her requirements were calculated at a minimum of 600,000 tons per month. Even this minimum quantity was never received.

The "Corriere Della Sera" is quoted as saying:

"In order to meet the requirements of the economic reconstruction of the industries of the country, it was agreed, after the armistice, that Italy should receive 800,000 tons per month. Instead of this quantity, however, Italy has received, between January and June, an average of only 483,722 tons per month. The cause of this alarming reduction is principally that England can today only export a total of 40,000,000 tons per annum, owing to a reduced output. In America the production is being rapidly increased and one day, no doubt, American coal will take the place of English coal in Italy. For the present, however, the shipping shortage and high freights make the price too high.

"According to the peace treaty, Germany has to supply the allies with a minimum of 40,000,000 tons of coal for ten years, of which about 7,500,000 tons would come to Italy. It must be noted, however, that during the absence from Paris of the Italian representatives a clause was inserted to the effect that in the event of Germany not being able to supply the minimum quantity, as above, priority shall be given to cover the deficiency caused by the destroyed mines. Italy, therefore, may not even obtain the quantity allotted to her. The outlook continues to be very serious, and measures should be taken to insure a sufficient supply of coal to Italy, without which her industries must so suffer as to make her financial position extremely critical."

U. S. Debt Increases.

Washington, September 3.—The United States owed $798,668,11 more at the close of the treasury business August 30 than on the last day of July, making the total national debt $26,536,701,648. Issuance of additional treasury certificates in anticipation of forthcoming payments on taxes and the Victory loan accounted for the large increase.

SENDS HUNDREDS OF MILES TO GET PEPSINOL

The Great Tonic That Users Insist on Getting Because It Brings Vitality and Health.

"Some days ago I bought a bottle of Pepsinol. Can't get the remedy any more. The remedy did me so much good that I thought I would write you myself. Will you please send me a bottle of Pepsinol or write me where I can get it?" This unsolicited testimonial was written by Mr. W. A. Lee, of Blackwell, Oklahoma. Note that Mr. Lee felt the beneficial effects of Pepsinol a few days after he started taking the first bottle. Failing to get a further supply locally, Mr. Lee sends hundreds of miles to get another bottle of Pepsinol. Could any preparation receive a stronger endorsement? Yet, this is only one of the thousands of similar letters that grateful users of this wonderful tonic write from all parts of the United States.

Pepsinol is tonic, digestive, gently laxative and corrective in its effects. It builds up after sickness. It gives you a hearty appetite. Pepsinol is a splendid blood purifier and therefore plays an important part in keeping the complexion clear and health glowing. In ailments arising from stomach troubles, indigestion, dyspepsia and constipation, Pepsinol will be found exceedingly beneficial.

You will really enjoy the taste of Pepsinol—it is very palatable and appetizing. Its purity is beyond question. It is the best and safest reconstructive tonic for young and old of both sexes. When you think of "pep" think of Pepsinol.

Genuine Pepsinol is made only by The Peplax Medicine Co., Memphis, Tenn., and is in strict accordance with the Medical Standards of the United States Pharmacopea. To be convenient for everybody and yet to prevent substitutes being sold for Pepsinol, we have appointed a special "Pepsinol Agent" in each section of Atlanta in Jacobs' Pharmacy Company, 6 and 8 Marietta St., 23 Whitehall St., 102 Whitehall St., 423 Marietta St., Buckhead, Ponce de Leon Apartments, 152 Decatur St., 266 Peters St., 70 West Mitchell.

And So They Were Married

Episode IX. (Reverse)

BY HAZEL DEYO BATCHELOR

(Copyright, 1919, for The Constitution.)

CHAPTER VII.

Ruth had not seen Scott during the entire evening. When the good-night waltz came, and no one came to ask her to dance she really felt angry. Scott had not only been thoughtless, he had been selfish in the extreme. He had thought only of himself the entire evening.

She watched the couples pair off for the last dance in accordance with the way they liked each other. She had that impulse to run away and hide until looking in through the window she suddenly spied Scott dancing with Dot Salisbury.

Dot of all people! And the last dance.

She saw the tall captain come up to her and knew that Scott had taken Dot away from him, and that he was asking her, Ruth, to dance only because he wanted to dance with some one. Not for the world, however, would she have refused. She would have danced with anyone just to be on the floor, just to have Scott see her.

As she got up to go inside with the captain, she heard Mrs. Moore call after her laughingly.

"I see your husband has finally been lured into the dance floor."

She smiled vacantly but said nothing. Then she was dancing, and right after the dance Scott came up to her. There was nothing of guilt in his face or in his manner. He had plainly not done anything that might hurt Ruth, that is, in his estimation. Ruth felt that it was almost funny. Womanlike she would have preferred Scott to actually do something and to recognize his selfishness and be sorry for it, than to have him do so without knowing he was hurting her. That showed such an absolute lack of any kind of thought.

"Had a good time?" Scott asked her, as they were going out to the machine.

"Oh, yes; have you?" Ruth's tone was icy.

Scott shot a glance at her and knew that something was wrong, but he said nothing. They drove home in silence, even the two girls were quiet, and Miss Lovett's head rested lightly on Lieutenant Everett's shoulder. Ruth learned that he was staying at the house.

Once at home, however, Beatrice waked up. She was instantly hungry.

"Let's see what's in the ice box, boys," she said to Kenneth and the soldier. Miss Lovett, who had rested languidly against Lieutenant Everett on the way home, was also instantly alert at the mention of food.

Mrs. Moore seemed to take for granted the fact that Ruth and Scott did not want to forage for food. If the truth be known, Ruth would have been eager to do that very thing under other circumstances. As it was, she wouldn't for the world have gone out where she knew she wasn't wanted.

She forced herself to talk to Mr. Moore and sighed with relief when he took her in and showed her his library. The library was wonderful in itself, but she was glad to get away from Scott.

Afterward when they were actually alone in their room, neither spoke. Ruth was waiting for Scott to say something. Oh, surely he would; it was his place to speak, to give some explanation of his attitude. But he said nothing at all and all the while Ruth's anger was mounting. From being hurt and unhappy she was beginning to be furiously angry. In fact, her feelings all evening had wavered between hurt pride and fury.

"Aren't you going to say anything?" she burst out finally.

"What do you want me to say? You began things by taking this attitude."

"And you think I had no justification for it?" Ruth's tone was tense.

"Just why are you so angry?"

This was the climax, that Scott should not even know what he had done. How could he; oh, how could he?

"You don't think you have any cause to be sorry for the evening?"

Scott's surprise was genuine. "I didn't know that anything was wrong, until you began to treat me coldly at the dance."

He was coming across the room to her now, pleading on his boyish face, and Ruth in spite of his selfish thoughtlessness, in spite of everything, began to relent. After all, half of her displeasure had been due to the fact that she had felt so old and had been treated so by the younger set. Why should she take it out on Scott?

He had his arms about her now and was whispering. "What is it?"

"Your leaving me all evening," she burst out, "and then dancing the last dance with someone else."

"But I couldn't find you anywhere," Scott persisted.

Ruth's heart was singing again. He had looked for her! The cloud was lifting. And then she realized that Scott was speaking. What was that, that he was saying?

"That Dot Salisbury is an adorable little thing, don't you think so, Ruth? She seems such a child, so artless and young."

Dot Salisbury of all people for Scott to mention particularly as young and artless, a scheming little flirt!

Ohl-Webster Wedding Event of Brilliance

Miss Joan Kingsley Ohl, daughter of Mr. Josiah Kingsley Ohl, editor of The New York Herald, and Mrs. Ohl, of No. 55 East Sixty-fifth street, New York city, was married at noon yesterday in the Church of the Heavenly Rest to Mr. David Frank Webster, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Scott Webster, of San Francisco, Cal. The ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Dr. W. F. Peirce, president of Kenyon college, was followed by a breakfast for the wedding party in the Gotham hotel.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was attended by Miss Ruth Hitchcock, daughter of Mr. Gilbert M. Hitchcock, United States senator from Nebraska; Miss Betty Andrews, daughter of Mr. Garnett Andrews III., of Chattanooga, Tenn., and a cousin of the bride; Miss Lelia Gordon, daughter of Mrs. George Barnett, of Washington, D. C., and Miss Marion Mellen, of New Orleans, who was maid of honor.

The bride's dress was of white duchesse satin, finished with a court train of silver brocade. A spray of orange blossoms was fastened to the corsage of tulle and silver, and small clusters of orange blossoms looped up the draperies of the skirt. A wreath of the same flowers crowned the coiffure, which was dressed low and parted, and held the veil of tulle edged with Carrickmacross lace. The veil had been worn by the bride's most intimate friend, Mrs. Gilbert Eliott, at her wedding in Southampton several years ago. The veil, with the blue ribbon attached to the bride's Belgian decoration worn on the corsage, fulfilled the old adage that a bride should wear "Something old and something new; something borrowed and something blue." Her ornaments were a diamond pin and pearl earrings and she carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

In dresses of white silk net and lace over flesh-colored taffeta and with shepherdess hats, the bridesmaids formed a charming group. The skirts were caught high at the hips and looped at either side with pink ribbon bows. The hats were of white lace, with wreaths of pink roses and were caught under the chin with pink ribbons. Pink satin strapped slippers and pink hose finished their effective costumes. Each carried a formal bouquet of pink flowers set in a lace paper border.

Mr. Hugh Webster, the bridegroom's brother, was the best man, and Captain Creswell Micoy, U. S. M. C., Dr. Conrad Jenny, first secretary of the Swiss legation, and Messrs. Robert Halsey Patchin and E. B. Bruce were the ushers.

There was a departure from modern customs and a reversion to an old-time form when the bride and bridegroom exchanged rings during the betrothal part of the ceremony.

Mrs. Webster was educated at the convents of the Sacred Heart in this and other countries and passed two years at the New York convent in Manhattanville. Most of her time until recent years was spent with her parents abroad and in the Far East, particularly in Manila, in Japan and at Pekin.

A Belgian Decoration.

Baron de Cartier de Marchienne, the Belgian ambassador to the United States, was an intimate friend of Mrs. Webster and her family during the years they were in Pekin, and he realized that her social training there, associated as he was with diplomatic life, would be of great service to him in Washington in assisting him with his private correspondence and also with Belgian relief work in a period of great stress. Accordingly he obtained the consent of her father to have her enrolled on the staff of the Belgian embassy as honorary attache for the period of the war. In this capacity her services were much appreciated by the Belgian government.

It was at the conclusion of her duties a few weeks ago that the ambassador, in behalf of the Belgian government, decorated her with the Medaille de Son Altesse la Duchesse de Vendome. During her residence in Washington Mrs. Webster also served with the Red Cross canteen established by Mrs. Larz Anderson. She is a popular member of the diplomatic and army and navy sets of Washington society.

Like his bride, Mr. Webster has traveled extensively. He was born in Albany but was taken to San Francisco by his parents in his infancy. His commercial interests took him to the Far East and he has passed much of his business career in Kobe and Manila. He is vice president of the Pacific Commercial company, the New York Pacific company and the Anderson-Meyer company the first named company being the largest importing company in Manila. The honeymoon will be passed in the Berkshires and, after spending a few weeks in New York and San Francisco, Mr. and Mrs. Webster will start for Manila, where his business will keep him for some time.

Mr. Webster's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Scott Webster, are members of Old Scotch families. His father came from Scotland to America with his young wife and established himself in California, where he became one of the successful business men of San Francisco.

The Bride's Family.

Before becoming managing editor of The Herald Mr. Ohl, the bride's father, was head of the Far Eastern service for that newspaper for a number of years. He is president of the alumni of Kenyon college, his alma mater, and in that capacity has interested himself in younger college students of small means who are seeking college educations. He is a member of the Gridiron club of Washington, a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of London, and has received from Belgium the decoration of Chevalier of the Order of Leopold, and from Italy that of Commander of the Crown.

Through her mother, who was Maude Annulet Andrews, of Washington, Wilkes county, Georgia, Mrs. Webster is of prominent southern family and a niece of the late United States Senator Robert Toombs.

A Distinguished Company.

Among the guests from Washington were Mr. Vittoria Falorsi, of the Italian embassy, and Mrs. Falorsi; Mr. Henri Mazet, of the French high commission; General Collardet, military attache of the French embassy; Mr. Alex Patenotte, second secretary of the Belgian embassy; Major General George Barnett, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Barnett; Mrs. Allan Dougherty, United States Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock and Mrs. Hitchcock; Miss Gladys Hinckley, Major General George B. Duncan, U. S. A., and Mrs. Duncan, and Commander Edgar Lyons Woods, medical corps, U. S. N., and Mrs. Woods.

From other cities the guests included Mr. and Mrs. Garnett Andrews, of Chattanooga, Tenn., Mrs. E. R. Finkenstardt, of Cleveland; Captain Brooks Upham, U. S. N., and Mrs. Upham, of Philadelphia; Colonel and Mrs. Henry Watterson, of Louisville; Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Doe; Mr. Alla Pollok, of San Francisco; Mr. and Mrs. P. van Roon, of The Hague, Holland, and from New York there were Mr. C. E. Atkinson, Lieutenant Walter Atkinson, Mr. Eugene Donegani, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Egan, Mr. and Mrs. Gustavus T. Kirby, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Patchin, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Pignatel, Mr. and Mrs. John Barry Ryan, Mr. and Mrs. Ernesto Simondetti, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clapp Smith, Mrs. Willoughby Sharp Miss Dorohty Sharp, Mr. Frank B. Flaherty, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Bruce and Mr. Edward Hartman.

Louisiana Thrift Director Interesting Visitor in City

Mrs. Lydia Wickliffe Holmes, state director for Louisiana of Thrift and War Savings Stamps, with her little daughter, Brent. Mrs. Holmes spent yesterday in Atlanta to confer with Mrs. Samuel Lumpkin, director of the Sixth Federal Reserve district.

Mrs. Lydia Wickliffe Holmes, state director for Louisiana of thrift and war savings stamps, the woman who is given the credit by the men in authority in her state for selling $12,000,000 worth of war savings stamps last year, was an interesting visitor in Atlanta yesterday, coming for a conference with Mrs. Samuel Lumpkin, director for the sixth federal reserve district.

"Louisiana is the second state in this district," said Mrs. Holmes yesterday, "to give the direction of the thrift campaign to the women. Tennessee was the first, and I believe that these two southern states are the pioneers for the whole country.

"Do I think that the women of Louisiana will make a success of the undertaking?

"I am counting on them to such extent that I expect to have an organization in every ward in Louisiana. The women in the last campaign covered 66 out of the 77 parishes in the state. With the added new obligation confronting them, I expect them to rise to the occasion.

"In organizing Louisiana for the campaign we are just entering upon," said Mrs. Holmes, "I have formed a state board of women, and we have asked bankers and other prominent men to act as an advisory council.

"All our speakers are going to put thrift and savings to the women of the state as a first obligation in their new responsibility.

Women's Obligation.

"I refer to their responsibility in the big part they are given, like the women of every state in the thrift campaign, and to the obligation of their citizenship.

"For citizenship in a democracy carries an obligation, and whether we know it or not, the backbone of our nation hinges on thrift. It gave the pilgrim fathers their start in life and set the wheels in motion for the world's greatest nation.

"But what has now come to this nation? We were awakened suddenly as from a dream and hurled headlong into the most barbarous war the world has ever known, and upon taking an inventory, what did we find? We were hopelessly involved in riotous expenditure made more possible by a still more ruinous credit system. The government, taking cognizance of this fact, immediately began a systematic campaign to educate the people of the nation in thrift through its W. S. S.

The work of that organization has given a new era of thought to the women of the nation and the higher ideals. Many, however, only practiced this economy during the war. We did that to save democracy, and now in this great turmoil of reconstruction we must make safe that same world for democracy—that is our business now, and the job is a big one. The ruin of the fallen nations of the world is a history of extravagance and luxury run riot which has been led by the women. What is a democracy after all, but self-government? And since we are to be shortly a true democracy, where each citizen, regardless of sex, carries an obligation, we must assume our responsibility.

It is the woman's part to do that thing which more especially deals with the home and children. And what can she do unless the foundation of it all is built on thrift? To the women who are assuming this great new blessing of a part and a voice in the government which controls the home and governs her children, I say, this is your part, and it's a larger part for humanity—this upbuilding and upkeep of your nation. It is in your hands, and your hands are the hands of American women and they are strong, capable hands."

Mrs. Holmes' Equipment.

She has for some time been state chairman of the woman's suffrage party. During the war she helped organize the State Council of Defense, personally organized the sixth congressional district and served on the state council and was appointed by the governor on his bureau of speakers. She was state chairman of the woman's division, war savings, when she was responsible for the $12,000,000 record above referred to. She covered half the state in that campaign and the women who covered the rest were her appointees.

"Women of all interests worked with me," said Mrs. Holmes, "but in every case I find that the best speakers, the most effective workers, are the suffragists, because they have the training. During the war, of course, we let suffrage carry itself, while we helped carry the war."

A Woman's Success.

Mrs. Holmes has taken fruitful part, also in the achievement of improved legislation in Louisiana as related to the property rights of women.

Sometimes my work in this direction has grown out of a desire to advance my own personal business interests," continued Mrs. Holmes, "but what I have been able to bring about has helped the interests of other women. One woman's success in a new field means other women's. The last do not have to fight so hard."

Playing Like Champs Behind Daniel Boone Crackers Defeat Pels

Elongated Hurler Holds Husky New Orleans Batters to Three Singles, While Torkelson Is Hit Hard—Birds Drop to Third Place.

By Les Rawlings.

New Orleans, La., September 3.—(Special.)—There was no question about who would take the second game of the Cracker-Pel series at Heinemann field this afternoon when Dan'l Boone showed he was right in the first several innings. He allowed the Pelicans only three scattered hits during the entire nine innings, while the Crackers made ten off Pitcher Torkelson and romped away with a 5 to 0 score.

Boone had the Dobbers eating out of his hand during the entire contest, while poor support caused Torkelson to go wrong. His team laid down behind him after they had started his downfall.

Bob Higgins and Boone were the stars of the occasion, the former catching a sterling game, the kind he alone is capable of receiving in Martin's circuit, and getting two two-baggers out of three times at the plate. For his part of the day, Boone lammed a triple to right, scoring Dykes ahead of him, and succeeded in striking out Torkelson, the Pelican heavy hitter, on two occasions.

Crackers Played Well.

The entire Cracker squad played jam-up baseball with only one error, that by Damrau, which didn't amount to much. Frank's youngsters had two speedy double plays to their credit.

The Pelican machine didn't go so badly at the start of the game, and was fast enough to count for two double plays and one spectacular bit of fielding by Daniels in the first inning. Three errors by Fiedler, Daubert and Agnew cost the Pelicans the game.

The first Atlanta score came in the fourth inning when, with two out, Galloway singled to right, Dykes singled to left and Bob Higgins scored them with a crashing double to left. Boone flied out to right to close the inning.

One more run came in the fifth, when Kopp doubled to right. Damrau singled through the pitcher's box, with the Pelican infield gazing at the ball, and making no attempt to field it. Herndon flied out to left. Mayer forced Kopp at the plate and when the entire Pelican team turned its back, Damrau and Mayer executed a double steal. Agnew got excited and threw the ball to center field, Damrau scoring.

Two More in Ninth.

The Crackers rested then until the ninth, when they again counted two tallies. Dykes singled through second. Higgins sacrificed him to second, and then the mighty Boone swatted the pill to center for a triple and Dykes raced home. When Fiedler allowed the relay to third to get away from him, Boone went home, leaving the impression that he had hit a home run with many of the jubilant fans, who were pulling for the big youngster.

The Pelicans looked as if they didn't even want to come back, and with Red Torkelson putting up the only battle for the team the fans began leaving the park in droves at the end of the fifth inning. There was no repetition of the unpleasantness which occurred in Tuesday's contest. Reeza was out of the game under suspension, with Deberry on first and Agnew behind the bat.

Atlanta's youngsters are determined to leave for Birmingham with a clean slate, and three victories to their credit tomorrow night, but chances are Thursday's contest will be more gruelling even than the first one, as Dixie Walker is slated to pitch for the Dobbsmen against Johnny Suggs for Atlanta.

By Gene Hinton.

That wonderful young group of ball players known to all the south as the "Atlanta Crackers" have cinched the pennant in the Southern league for the season of 1919, which will come to a close in a few days.

This remarkable feat was accomplished yesterday afternoon by a victory over the formerly haughty, but now humble, Pelicans, habitants of New Orleans, Louisiana, and after one of the hardest fights that has ever been seen in this circuit.

In the first part of the season the Pels, their supporters, and practically all the "experts" in the league predicted that the Birds would win the pennant in a walk. Then, all of a sudden as it were, the youthful Atlanta Crackers popped into the limelight and started one of the wildest rampages seen in the league in many a day.

Even this spurt in its infancy did not cause any great furore in the league outside of Atlanta. All the other teams said that it was merely a flash in the pan, and that in a very short time the Crackers would crack, and would start down the slippery chute.

Did Not Crack.

But lo and behold, the predicted crack never came, the Crackers seemed to be imbued with the winning fever, and so after ousting the Pels from their favorite position, the locals are enjoying the sweet fruits of their terrific efforts.

Too much cannot be said for the fighting spirit and teamwork of the Crackers. Struck by hard luck and set-backs of all kinds, the Crackers only girded their armament on all the firmer and stuck to their post.

In the last Pel series in this city, the Crackers had all the breaks against them and didn't do as well as was expected of them. However, it is a knokn fact that the local team has it cards and spades over the Peltown bunch, and this is being proven in the present series to the supreme satisfaction of everybody, particularly the Pelican team, and so far have won two straight games, the only two played.

The New Orleans team has been noted for many years as the toughest team in the league to meet on its own lot but the Crackers dispelled this idea with a vengeance.

Many Are Collegians.

Most ofthe players on the team are just out of college and are taking their fling at professional ball. This makes their record all the more impressive and wonderful. A group of young players, after going through most of the season of bitter fighting, may be expected to break under the strain of a crucial series. But not so with the Crackers. Of late they have playing just as good ball as they did in the middle of the new historic drive. They are performing like verterans on the field both at bat and in the field, and have shown no evidence of a crack.

As far as the Southern League pennant is concerned, however, the Crackers can crack to their heart's content, for nothing short of Providence can rob the Crackers of their dues now.

New Orleans, La., September 3.—There is no joy in Pelville, the mighty Crackers are on top. This means that the rushing, romping and otherwise great Crackers have the 1919 Southern league flag neatly tied up in a bundle, and scheduled for shipment to Atlanta for the season of 1920. The great feat was accomplished yesterday, when the Frankmen took the second game of the series by the score of 5 to 0 from the fallen Pels.

Old Dan'l Boone, realizing the exigency of the situation, rose to the occasion in great style and had the slugging Pels eating out of his huge and hairy paw. Dan'l never looked better than he did today, and his puzzling underhand ball kept the Pel batters guessing.

Great crowds; that is, great crowds for New Orleans, have greeted the Crackers in this series, and they weren't all pulling for their own team. Some of the fans seem to know real baseball when they see it, and the Crackers fell in for their share of the applause.

The feat of the Crackers in winning the pennant seems all the more wonderful when one takes into consideration the hard luck that the youthful wonders struck all the way through.

That was one bunch of disgruntled Pel players after the game today. With the pennant theirs at the early part of the season, according to the experts, they were caught up with and finally passed by a team that at first was not considered to have an outside chance.

The Crackers looked like a million dollars today. Playing in the field like major leaguers and hitting poor "Tork" with much vim and gust, the boys certainly looked the champions they are.

Wild scenes are being enacted in this burg. Johnny Dobbs is rushing around with a hunted look on his face, while Prexy Heinnemann, the genial boss of the locals, looks as if he had lost his last friend. All these gallivantings were brought on solely and entirely b your Crackers, the greatest young ball team in the universe.

While sitting around the hotel lobby this afternoon we picked an all-southern team, with a second or substitute outfit, which even the boys and Manager Frank claim to be one of the strongest outfits on paper ever seen in this circuit.

The first team, of course, had to have some Atlanta players on it, because they have helped make up the best team in the league this season, and there is no question but what the other sport scribes of the circuit will agree that they deserve the places assigned them.

Starting with the pitching staff, we selected Sheehan, Rube Robinson, Hub Perdue, Jonnard, Bennie Karr and Morrison. The catchers undoubtedly are Higgins and Brottem. On first base we put Ivy Griffin; on second, Jimmy Dykes; Graff on third; McMillan, shortstop; Gilbert, centerfield; Sullivan, left field, and Burke, right field.

Just for the sake of argument the first team went into the field against the second nine with Brottem catching for the second bunch and Higgins behind the plate for the first. As pitchers we started Sheehan for the first crowd, with Robinson for the second.

The best "Doc" Auten could give them was a 36-inning draw, 0 to 0, and, after arguing the point to and fro until time for the game, the rest of the gang decided to let "Doc" rule the meeting, and the contest was officially scored that way.

"Terrible Tom" said he knew why he was so tired tonight when told about his 36-inning game, but had attributed it to trying to buy enough food for Lena Styles before they told him about his draw with "Rube."

ATLANTA GIANTS PLAY CUBS OF MONTGOMERY

The Atlanta Giants, a local organization of ball tossers, will take on the fast Montgomery Cubs in a game this afternoon at Morris Brown university.

The Giants team is one of the strongest colored teams in the city, and it has made an enviable record this season. The crew has defeated practically every team of note in the city and many out-of-town teams. On the club are several strong players, and a great article of ball is presented when they take the field against an opponent.

The Cubs, of Montgomery, have an exceedingly strong bunch of men and have been defeating everything in sight around their neck of the woods. They should give the Giants a healthy tussle for first honors, and the game should be a humdinger.

The contest will start at 3:30 o'clock and white people are cordially invited to attend, as a special section of the grandstand will be set aside for them.

ONE DAY OUT OF FOUR FOR MACON FIREMEN

Macon, Ga., September 3.—(Special.)—Hereafter members of the Macon fire department will have one day out of every four away from duty, through the addition of seven new members to the department, for which city council has just appropriated the necessary money to pay the salaries of the new men for the balance of the year. Heretofore the firemen have had only one day in six, being continuously on the job for that length of time, except when they went to their homes for meals three times a day. The request for the change in working hours was made after the firemen had organized a union.

Sennett's Beauties Sufficiently Clad, Decides Recorder

The case against Frank Martin, advance agent for "Mack Sennett's Bathing Beauties," now playing at the Atlanta theater, made following several complaints to Chief of Police Beavers, was dismissed Wednesday afternoon by Recorder Johnson. The charge against Mr. Martin was "violation of section 1,763 of the city code."

According to Chief Beavers, complaints were filed with him following the initial performance of the show Monday afternoon. He stated that those making the complaints based their charges on the grounds that the girls appeared in bathing suits of "abbreviated" vogue.

At the trial Wednesday several witnesses were examined, the majority of them stating that they saw nothing offensive in the performance.

MAJOR PALMER HEAD OF RAINBOW SOCIETY

Macon, Ga., September 3.—(Special.)—Major James H. Palmer, of Macon, who commanded the 149th machine gun battalion during the latter period of the war, but who was formerly captain of the Macon Hussars, has been chosen president of the Georgia chapter of the Rainbow society. Major Palmer succeeds Major E. J. Peacock, Jr., who was elected to that position before the 151st machine gun battalion, a part of the famous Rainbow division, returned from France. Major Peacock resigned because his business affairs would not permit of his giving the time necessary to the organization.

COMISKEY IS OPPOSED TO COMMISSION'S PLAN

Chicago, September 3.—Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the Chicago Americans, tonight declared his opposition to the proposal of the national baseball commission that the world's series be increased from seven to nine games. He said that he could see no reason for turning from the custom of playing a series of seven games to decide the world's championship.

Members of the White Sox had no game scheduled today and the players witnessed the game between the Chicago Nationals and Cincinnati, to get a line on the club they expect to meet in the baseball classic next month.

CLARK GRIFFITH BRANDS YANKEES AS BIG BLUFFERS

Clark Griffith, of the Washington Senators, is on the warpath. He brands Colonels Ruppert and Huston, of the New York Yankees, as the champion bluffers of North America, and says before another baseball season has dawned in this country, both of them will be made to see the folly of their rash acts in the Mays case.

Griffith lines up solidly with Ban Johnson. He does not even hesitate to oppose Charley Comiskey, because he says he has proof that every club in the Johnson circuit was advised to "lay off" Carl Mays, and that New York and Boston got their heads together just for the purpose of getting Johnson "in bad" with the public.

Griffith cites the fact that under the rules, no club in the American has a right to vote while that club is under a suspension of any kind. In spite of this, he says Boston and New York voted with Comiskey to annul Johnson's suspension of Hurler Mays, rendering the vote absolutely worthless.

That Griffith has taken a stand with Johnson in the Mays matter is of the greatest importance to baseball men. The Washington leader has not always been so friendly to Big Ban, and only last winter was charged with being one of the promoters behind the movement to oust Johnson after the league head made his famous utterance in favor of applying for exemption of all ball players who were eligible for the United States army draft.

"When Frazee, Ruppert and Comiskey got together to take that vote, Comiskey was the only one with a right to vote," said Grif, "and he hasn't a chance in the world to think we are going to stand for one man doing all the voting in this crcuit."

Griffith's tone and speeches would indicate he intends to have something to say about the Mays deal and the vote to annul Johnson's suspension when the moguls gather. "The Mays deal is one of the jokes of the season," said Grif, "and it certainly cannot stand on its merits." Griffith declared there was no rupture in his friendship for Comiskey, but that he was not going to sacrifice his right to an opinion in the Mays case.

DISREGARDS ORDERS AND GOES TO PELTOWN

Mobile, Ala., September 3.—Despite instructions from President Martin, of the Southern association, not to transfer the games originally scheduled for this city to New Orleans, President John D. Logan and the Mobile club will entrain for the Crescent City Friday morning.

Fire, which early Tuesday morning destroyed the local grandstand, has made baseball in this city a losing proposition. The three games remaining to be played with the Pelicans on the local lot, two regularly scheduled ones and one postponed tilt.

In a statement tonight President Logan stated that he had made arrangements with President A. J. Heinemann, of the New Orleans club, to transfer the games to that city Friday and Saturday and that he was going through with the transfer regardless of protests and contrary to instructions from the head of the association.

Birmingham today played a double-header with the Bears, moving up the game regularly scheduled for tomorrow and making tomorrow an open date for both clubs. The Birmingham squad caught a train for the Magic City this evening.

The report of Babe Ruth's hit the other day adds to the historic events of the sport. According to report Babe hit a fly so high that the outfielders could not judge it and it was scored a triple. However, that is nothing to Jim Ryan's record breaking hit, or even Joe Kelly's longest drive. Kel was hitting on the old Boston grounds one afternoon and drove a line fly over the left field fence. A fast train was racing past the grounds, the ball smashed a window and landed inside, not stopping short of One-hundred and Twenty-fifth street in New York. That was heralded as the longest drive in the history—but Ryan's smash was longer. He was playing on the old Staten Island grounds the outfield of which was built up of planks over the beach and the surf. His long drive landed on the deck of a tramp steamer and stopped at Lisbon.

It is expected that fully 150 well-known golf players from every part of the country, including both amateurs and professionals, will take part in the southern open golf tourney which will be held on the East Lake links next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Already the affair has taken on a national aspect, as players from all four corners of the country have either paid their entrance fees or signified by telegram or letter that they will be on hand for the event, which will mark the south's first open golf championship, and also be one of the biggest forward steps southern golf has taken in many moons.

Atlanta's hopes for the victory remaining in the city will, of course, rest with Bobby Jones and J. Douglas Edgar, who is the holder of the Canadian open championship, which he captured recently. Edgar is also the French open champion.

Bobby is determined to win the tourney or know the reason why. He has been practicing daily since returning from the national amateur tourney at Oakmont, where he was runner-up in the championship event, and will tee off Monday in the zenith of condition, and fully prepared to give his best to capture the event.

The golf committee of the Atlanta Athletic club, which is sponsoring the first tourney of its kind ever to be staged in the southland, sent a number of queries by wire to well-known golf professionals and also amateurs of note, and it is expected that by tonight or Friday night the entry list will be agreeably swelled by the addition of a number of America's most noted players.

National Men Coming.

Other players who have already entered and who are golfers of extraordinary ability are Tom Boyd, of the Fox Hills club of New York. Boyd is the holder of the Irish open golf championship, and a player of skill.

George Fotheringham, who is the holder of the South African open crown; Leo Diegel, of the Detroit club, runner-up in this year's western open; Carl Anderson, of the Bronxville Golf club of New York, are among the other entrants of note.

With these stars in the tourney will have players of not only national but international reputations, for there will be the holders of the French, Canadian, South African and Irish open championships contending for the honor of winning the first southern open tournament.

Nelson Whitney, southern amateur champ, is another of the players who is expected to enter. It is also known that Richard Hickey and Richard Woolworth, two other Atlanta youths of more than passing ability, as well as a number of Atlanta's best players, will enter.

Chattanooga, Memphis, Knoxville, New Orleans, Dallas, Birmingham, Montgomery and Savannah will, it is expected, send delegations to the tourney, in addition to many other star players from the east, west and north who are expected.

The East Lake officials are exerting every means to get the links in the best of condition for the match, and a squad of workmen has been on them for the past three weeks daily, seeing that everything will be ready when the first two players tee off.

The play will be for seventy-two holes medal play, and the player with the lowest total score for the three days will win the tourney. Eighteen holes will be played Monday and Tuesday, while thirty-six will be played on Wednesday. Prizes aggregating $1,600 will be given the winners.

SUNNY ITALY WILL TAKE SHOT AT GAME OF HARNESS RACES

Italy is going to get into the light harness game. Valentine Capovilla, Italian sportsman, is now in this country buying trotters, and as soon as he can find sufficient number of high-class specimens to answer the requirements of his clients, he will ship them to Italy and the game will be on. He has purchased the following trotters and they are now at Goshen, N. Y., where they will be quartered until sent to New York from which port they will sail: Rusticoat, 2:08¼; Bacelli, 2:06¼; Zomrect, 2:03¾; Daisy Todd, 2:06½; Binlon, 2:08¼, and Minna Lewrey, 2:26¼, a youngster of unusual promise. It is not known how many horses Capovilla intends to buy.

Upon the arrival of Capovilla's first shipment of trotters, Italy will make its debut in the harness sport. These horses being purchased at this time will be used chiefly for breeding purposes, but they may also be used to matinee, to acquaint the natives with the ins and outs of the American pastime.

Capovilla has proven himself a keen judge of horse flesh and is a good sportsman. He paid the top prices asked by American owners, and seemed at once to realize that he was taking some of the best representatives of the trotter in this country. He has been in constant attendance at every grand circuit meeting since the 1919 season opened. He has bid on more than fifty trotters of national fame, and it is only natural to expect that he would meet some owners who could not be induced to sell.

The Italian sportsman was asked to take some of America's crack pacers to Sunny Italy, but he declined with thanks, stating that the pacing department would be introduced next year, if the sportsmen of his country displayed the proper interest in the trotter. Judging from his accounts Italy will be ideal for the harness pastime because of its even climatic conditions. There is plenty of pasture and four big stock farms will be started at once. Capovilla has tried to interest some of the American reinsmen in going to Italy, guaranteeing them lucrative positions, but none have accepted as yet.

Final Chance to See Boy Wonders In Action Next Sunday at Jessup

Benefit Game Will Be Played at Post Against a Soldier Team—Proceeds to Be Divided Among Locals.

By Les Rawlings.

New Orleans, La., September 3.—(Special.). — Manager Charley Frank, this morning announced in full, plans which will close the season for the Crackers which incorporate an exhibition game which is to be the final appearance of the 1919 champions in Atlanta.

Sunday afternoon the Frankmen play either Camp Jessup or Camp Gordon in a benefit game at Camp Jessup, the proceeds of the contest to be divided among the players.

Following the close of the series in Birmingham, the Crackers will leave at once for Atlanta, arriving Sunday morning, or late Saturday night. All of the players will remain with Manager Frank, with the exception of three or four, who must report to Connie Mack to help the Athletics in winding up the season.

Sheehan, Dykes and Kopp are certain of leaving the Crackers immediately following the wind up of the last Cracker games, and Manager Frank intends getting several members of the Birmingham team to play with his youngsters against either a team from Columbia, or one of the South Atlantic league cities. A five game series will be played with the South Atlantic team, the proceeds from the series to go to the players of both teams.

Crackers Play Winner.

In the Sunday contest at Camp Jessup the Crackers will play the winner of the game between the Fifth Division of Camp Gordon and the Camp Jessup nine. These two will stage a battle at Ponce de Leon park Saturday to see which team is going to meet the Cracker aggregation.

The loser in Saturday battle between the two camps, will also have a game with another team Sunday afternoon at Jessup, so there will be a double-header, in one game of which will be seen the Crackers.

"I'm going to do all in my power to get the boys a good nest egg for the winter before they leave morning, "and it will in a measure morning," and it will in a measure show the appreciation which the club officials would like to accord their team.

"You can just tell the people back in Atlanta that they can't think too much of the 1919 Crackers. I have never had an organization under me which fought harder or tried harder to play the game as it should have been played. They are in there every minute of every contest, fighting just as hard as they can fight."

It is probable the Crackers will be tendered a banquet in Birmingham before leaving that city inasmuch as Secretary Frank Reynolds, of the Atlanta Baseball Club, Charles Colsson, Doctor Auten and they wish to compliment the team before it finishes the final road trip of the season.

The youngsters are highly elated over beating "Hub" Perdue in their opening contest with New Orleans Tuesday afternoon and are having the time of their lives here. They are the idols of the New Orleans fans who are beginning to pull for them just as the ones in Mobile did.

Everywhere they are being boasted as the best and most gentlemenly team the Southern circuit has ever produced, and it is only natural that they should be made much of wherever they go.

When the boys break up after all the benefit games are over and they are ready to separate to their various homes and occupations it is going to be a sad day for them all. They have expressed their opinions to a man of hating to leave Atlanta and the rest of their mates because they have gone "over the top" together and fought a good fight.

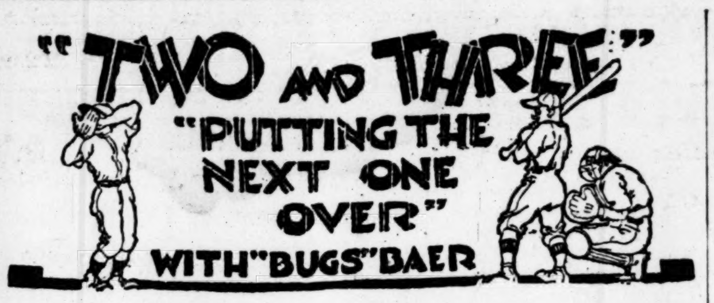
McCain Is Killed.

Valdosta, Ga., September 3.—(Special.)—J. A. McCain, white man, was killed by his roommate, B. G. Gupton, Tuesday night at Haylew, ten miles east of this city, according to reports received from that place. It is said that both men were drinking. Gupton is said to have disappeared after the killing.



FARMERS SLAPPED DAYLIGHT SAVING LAW SILLY.

IF CONGRESS KEEPS ON MONKEYING with that law everybody will be dizzier than a roach trying to crawl downstairs on an escalator. First, they had the cuckoos chirping one dozen at 11 o'clock and now they've got 'em shortchanging us again. First thing you know the sun will think it's the moon.

THE BILL CROAKING THE DAYPOWER SAVING was passed over the president's veto. A veto is some authority possessed by an executive that gives congress the parliamentary power to call him a liar without being pinched. For instance, congress passes a bill, the president smears his veto on it and congress passes it again.

THE ONLY FEATURE ABOUT THE WHOLE WORKS being that congress gets double pay for doing a thing once.

THE FARMERS DON'T WANT TO SAVE DAYLIGHT. They don't want to save anything that you can't sell by the bushel. The country is hard enough to look at without having an extra hour to hurt your eyes with. It makes the hicks scramble out of the hay an hour earlier. Ordinarily, a farmer doesn't rise until late in the evening. If he can't sleep at least two hours he thinks he must have a tinge of insomnia. He tumbles loose from the alfalfa about the same time that the owls take off their smoked glasses and the cats cut the mufflers out on their laryngeal exhausts. When the rest of the works is giving a short series of chautauqua snore talks through its nose, John Farmer rattles out into the wide, wide world, which ain't so wide since the antis started to pass their narrow laws, and starts out to milk the cows with a cash register. He gets 20 cents a quart for that milk, which is 16 cents more than he knocked off in 1904. It's still the same cow, eats the same grass, its vocabulary is the same old moo-moo, the milk is as royal blue as ever, but it costs five times more. The only explanation for this is that the constitution of the United States was written on a Ouija board.

THEN THE FARMER TAKES ADVANTAGE of the extra hour of darkness to sneak up on the hens and bilk 'em out of their eggs at 80 cents a dozen. Ten years ago, eggs were 15 a dozen. Hen still claws the same old worms which haven't advanced a cent in price since Noah first took 'em in as boarders on the Ark. Hen still eats the same old feed, chirps the same cackle and tastes as tough in a pot pie. Everything is still the same, and in most instances it's the same old egg. No reason for the boost in price except that the farmer is trying to get the price of a clock back that he wore out trying to keep it right with whatever time congress voted it to be.

NOW CONGRESS HAS PUT THE CLOCKS BACK sixty little tick-tocks, but who's going to put the eggs and milk back sixty slicks? You can't blame the farmer for trying to get even. First congress gave 'em an hour of daylight then took it back again. You can't borrow an hour like you can a lawn mower. An alarm clock is a thingamajigger that makes the wrong noise at the right time. It wakes the city sapps up and it wakes the country lobs up, the only difference is that the bird in the country gets up and stays up.

THE HICKS GOT THEIR EXTRA HOUR of sunbeams and also about everything else. They're all plodding around in Rolls-Royces complaining about John D. shooting up to 30 cents a gallon. We also get the surplus hour of about as much light as will filter through a smoke-spangled office window. But we don't get anything extra to look at. The only comeback we have is that congress is going to get after the producers of the high cost of living.

INDICATING THAT EARLY TO BED and earlier to rise makes a man healthy, wealthy and investigated.

On the Screen of Sports
By HUGH S. FULLERTON
With the Major Leagues

Sharonville, Ohio, September 3.—This city and its neighboring village of Cincinnati are all het up and a civil war impends over which is to have the honor of the world's series. The Cincinnati fans who claim to have been loyal to the Reds are in rebellion over the proposal to move the Reds out here, where there is room for a crowd, instead of playing the series in the old Red Park. They claim that "tentative plans" are made to seat several million persons in the Red Park and that with the improvements the old park will hold the largest crowds in the history of the series. Incidentally the Red Park will seat now about 21,000 persons and there is room for seats for perhaps ten thousand more, and it is declared that already there heve been applications for over 30,000 seats. The best plan, probably, would be to fence in the Ohio Valley and terrace the hills. There hasn't been so much excitement here since the mob burned the court house and George B. Cox was defeated in an election.

It is all over excepting to play the games. Bill Phelon has beaten everyone to it and he concedes the world's championship to the Reds in four straight games without an effort. He bases his hope on the fact that the Reds showed so much courage in dodging pop bottles in New York that no team can beat them.

For Cincinnati just now that is the sanest argument yet advanced. One guy down here offered to bet me Fountain Square and the Suspension Bridge that Eddie Collins won't get a hit in the series. The boys down here certainly do get warmed up over baseball.

They are even talking of allowing Pat Moran to change his name to Heinie Schweitzermann and become a resident.

There is a laugh in recent history surrounding the Reds. It seems that the directors of the team did not believe, until toward the middle of the last eastern trip, that the Reds could go through and capture the championship. They simply could not realize that they had a winning club. Just who the directors were I am unable to say, but a few names added to the city directory of Cincinnati generally will give a fairly comprehensible idea of the directors of the club.

Directors Are Stunned.

The fact that they were about to win seemed to stun them, and then someone remembered that the team ought to have another outfielder because Sherry Magee was ill. It was forgotten that, last spring when Eddie Rousch was holding out, the directors wouldn't give a cent to get him to sign and Moran had to take the reins in his own hands to do it. They forgot that Rube Bressler played a lot of games in the outfield while the club did not think it worth while to buy a real outfielder. The prospect of winning a championship evidently went to their heads and the directors constituted themselves a scouting committee and went out to buy outfielders.

It was declared that they grew so wild as to offer $20,000 and two players for Les Mann and that they offered more than that for George Whitted. It may sound impossible, but both offers were refused, and the directors wailed that the clubs were plotting against them and helping the Giants because they refused to sell them an outfielder.

At any rate Moran didn't let the directors direct the club. They were at liberty to direct all that sort of deals they wanted, but he attended to the players.

Moran, by the way, ought to put the black curse and utter the four thousand maledictions upon some of his admirers. They have begun calling him "Peerless Leader" and "Miracle Man" already and by the time the series is played there is no telling what it will be.

Moran was not called "Miracle Man" when he won with the Phils. He said "can that sort of bull" and went on with his work. He is not a miracle man—just a plain, earnest, honest, hard working fellow with a lot of brains who pays strict attention to his business. The big advantage he has over some of his rival managers is that he works hard and does not carry a side line to detract from his attention to his own club. Besides that he is square with his men and treats all alike.

While we are figuring how Moran managed to get through and win, look over the record of the Reds for the year. Moran has one trait that few managers have and that is giving the youngsters a chance. He has the interest of a young fellow at heart and he understands the bad effect upon an ambitious young fellow of keeping him on the bench and not giving him a chance to work.

Possibly he was compelled to use the youngsters—to use every bit of material at his command, but whatever the reason, the fact remains that he managed to come through, to develop pitchers during the race, and to end up with a pitching staff twice as strong as the one he had at the start. He gave chances to men who were kicked out by other clubs, aroused their ambition again, and got results.

McGraw Had Youngsters

Comparisons always are odious but take McGraw as an example. McGraw had more good, young material that Moran had. He knew, and everyone on the team knew, that his pitching staff was wobbly and that his infield was aging and liable to crack and need support in a long campaign. Yet the youngsters were loaned, leased or placed around the small leagues and not tried until circumstances compelled a trial. When he wanted a player to stop a gap he bought an experienced man—and caused a scandal.

Moran developed his own men. The only blot on the record of the Reds was the frenzied effort to buy an outfielder during the height of the eastern tour and it is well for Moran's hard earned reputation that it failed.

Phelon, by the way, not content with winning the championship, for the Reds, and grabbing the world's series a month before it is played, has torn the Giants to pieces. He has decreed that Chase is to be sent to the coast to play on a minor team, that Doyle is to be pensioned, Fletcher relieved and Zimmerman canned. He has traded Kauff, two catchers and four pitchers and started rebuilding McGraw's team for next year. It is an extremely graceful act, after the way the Giants have fought the Reds, for Bill to make a new team for them, but then, perhaps next season the Reds will yearn for a real contest.

"HOW TO PLAY BASEBALL IN 100 LESSONS."
By Hugh S. Fullerton

Lesson 88.

Avoiding Mixups.

Probably more games are lost through mixups between players as to which shall attempt the play than almost any other one thing. This is especially true of close games in which the pitching is "air tight," and in which, naturally, the players are keyed to higher and higher tension as play progresses. Outfielders hesitate as to which shall try for a ball, pitchers and second basemen continually clash hesitate and lose precious fractions of seconds before deciding which shall cover first base when the first baseman rushes forward to field a bunted ball. Third basemen shortstops and pitchers frequently blunder and sometimes collide in trying for bunts or for topped bounders, when the ball rolls slowly.

To avoid such mistakes should be the first understanding after a team is formed. The first rule of a club on taking the field in the spring should be that one man preferably the captain, shall call the name of the man who is to make the effort clearly and that no other player shall call out excepting the one making the effort. He should make his claim to a play instantly and go through with it without regard to any other player.

The field captain should cry out the name of the player who should instantly shout, "I have it"—nothing more. The player who also may have a chance to make the play then should call, "Take it, and drop into position to back up the play.

In the outfield, and on high foul flies, especially, the chances of a collision between two players running at top speed, looking upward and watching a ball, is dangerous and sometimes fatal. The thing most to be avoided, however, is hesitation. This hesitation most frequently is caused by lack of understanding between players, and by fear of a collision. No team can play good team ball unless each player has faith in the others and feels certain that each will obey the captain's order and respect the claim to the play.

In the outfield, after a fielder has claimed a catch, the other should continue to coach him by word while backing up, and encourage him by telling him the location of the ball by shouting, "Keep going," or "You're under it."

Often this system is of great value to the player working in a sunny field. His judgment of the ball may be hampered by the glare of the sun and a word of direction will enable him to locate it correctly.

Czintz and Harris Loom Up as Favorites In Net Championship

TODAY'S MATCHES.
Singles—Third Round.
3:30 O'Clock.
A. C. Gottsharlt vs. C. H. Candler, Jr.; W. W. Quillian vs. J. W. Caldwell.
5 O'Clock.
Berry Grant vs. Ed Clerk; Lewis Newman vs. Ernest Covington; C. S. Heyman vs. Henry Peeples; Johnny Hopking vs. C. W. Wayer; Johnny Greene vs. Stewart Harris.
Men's Doubles—First Round.
3:30 O'clock.
Hopkins and Warren vs. Matheson andMatheson.
3:30 O'Clock.
Peeples and Hansburger vs. Whittier and Crenshaw; Pim and Johnson vs. Caldwell and Johnson.

Fifteen players survived Wednesday's play in the city tennis championship tourney being conducted on the courts at Piedmont park for the Lowry National bank trophy, and with the playing of the seven matches scheduled for this afternoon, only eight will be left, and a good line on the prospective winner can be obtained.

Ignatz Czintz and Stewart Harris, the two youngsters who have gained quite a tennis reputation lately, loom up as the strongest possibilities right now, and the dope favors them as the contestants in the final match, which will in all likelihood be played Sunday afternoon. Czintz won his match from Norman Johnson in the second round in handy fashion, and then took on Joe Rankin in the third round and eliminated him. He will be idle today, but on Friday he tackles the winner of the Lewis Newman-Ernest Covington battle today for the right to play in the semi-finals.

Harris has several hard contestants to eliminate before he can enter the finals, Henry Peeples, J. W. Caldwell and W. W. Quillian, all being in his bracket of the tourney. However, he is going great and is pretty certain to win his way to the semi-finals if not further.

Nothing Unexpected Pulled.

Wednesday's matches brought forth none of the unexpected, except that Czintz had a much easier time defeating Norman Johnson than was expected. The matches moved off without mishap, and while several of them were hard fought affairs, none uncorked anything spectacular or unexpected.

The drawings in the men's doubles event were held during the afternoon, and are given below. Exactly sixteen teams will contest for the handsome cups offered by the Lowry National bank, and while some of the matches have been scheduled for this afternoon, this part of the tourney will not begin in earnest until Friday afternoon.

There are several very good teams entered in this event, and there promises to be a lively scrap before the final winner is adjudged. Czintoz and Harris, the winners of the Georgia state tennis tourney recently held at the Cascade club, are the favorites for the honors, although Clerk and Peeples and Pim and Johnson are other strong teams entered, as well as several others.

Grant Still Shining.

Berry Grant continued his good work Wednesday afternoon, and took a hard fought match from Z. Carnes in the second round. Carnes plays about the same style of game as young Grant, being unusually good at returning his opponent's shots, and the first set was a nip and tuck affair, Grant finally winning 8-6. In the second set, the youngster played a much stronger game and took the set and the match by a count of 6-2.

He will have the hardest battle of the tourney so far that he has encountered today when he meets Ed Clerk. Clerk is one of the most consistently steady players that has ever appeared in these parts, and young Grant will have to travel at a fast pace in order to down him.

Clerk plays the game along the old axiom of return whatever your opponent puts over, and sooner or later win the point. He very rarely uncorks anything like speed or feature playing, being content to stay back and wear his opponent out. Grant plays almost the same style of game, although he has a hibit of coming to the net whenever possible.

Czintz Beats Clerk.

Ignatz Czintz's easy victory over Norman Johnson, 6-1, 6-2, came somewhat as a surprise, as, although Czintz was the favorite before the match, it was not expected that he would win by such a margin. Ignatz started off strong, and kept Johnson away from the net by well-nigh perfect lobbing, while his own work at the net was everything that could be expected. He also had his service working in A-1 form, and several times aced his taller opponent.

Johnson's placing ability was away off, as time after time he failed to execute shots that have been easy for him before, while his work at the net was practically negligible, as Czintz kept him away from there whenever he got dangerous. Johnson's service was also working very poorly.

Not content with winning one match, Ignatz took on Joe Rankin immediately after downing Johnson and walloped him in straight sets, allowing only one game to get away from him. The scores were 6-0, 6-1.

Stewart Harris had little trouble in winning his first match of the tourney, Irvin Sargent being his victim. The scores of the two sets were 6-3, 6-1. Other good matches of the afternoon were C. H. Wager's win over C. H. White, 7-5, 6-4, and F. H. Peeples' defeat at the hands of Lewis Newman.

Feature Match Today.

Today's feature event will be the match at 3:30 o'clock between J. W. Caldwell and W. W. Quillian. Both of these players are looked upon as strong possibilities for finalists, and the elimination of one will give the other a good chance to go into the semi-finals on Friday. Caldwell showed up very good in his first match of the tourney, eliminating Lewis Brodstein in straight sets, 6-2, 6-2. Quillian has not yet played, drawing byes in his first and second round matches.

All matches will be played on the first five courts at the park, which have been set aside for the exclusive use of the tournament players. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Wednesday's Results.

4,000-ACRE ADDITION TO CHATHAM ACREAGE

Savannah, Ga., September 3.—(Special.)—Everything else is increasing, and to be consistent with the general tendency, the acreage in Chatham county has mounted by 4,000 acres in the past year, according to the tax digest just completed, which shows 170,000 acres of land in the county this year, against 166,000 does not explain it, nor has there been a deposit of 4,000 acres of soil at the mouth of the Savannah river on the Chatham county side in a twelvemonth. This land has been this year simply returned for taxation when it had not been previously returned or had been listed as "unknown as to ownership."

STUCK NAIL IN FOOT; FATAL TO AGED WOMAN

Savannah, Ga., September 3.—(Special.)—Mrs. Katie Exley, 60 years old, died at her home at Clyo, Ga., yesterday evening from blood poisoning. She stepped on a nail ten days ago and blood poisoning set in, defying the best medical attention that could be summoned.

NOW IS A GOOD TIME TO DRIVE OUT CATARRH

It May Not Be Troubling You During the Warm Weather, But It Is Still In Your Blood.

Catarrh is not only a disgusting disease, but is a dangerous one, and you should never let up in your efforts to get it out of your system until you have done it thoroughly. Get rid of it, whatever it costs you in trouble and money.

There is no use in permitting yourself to be deceived. Perhaps, like thousands of others afflicted with Catarrh, you are about ready to believe that the disease is incurable, and that you are doomed to spend the remainder of your days hawking and spitting, with no relief in sight from inflamed and stopped-up air passages that make the days miserable and the nights sleepless.

Of course this all depends upon whether or not you are willing to continue the old-time make-shift methods of treatment that you and many other sufferers have used for years with no substantial results.

You must realize that the disease itself, and not its symptoms, is what you have to cure. Of course you know that when you are cured of any disease its symptoms will disappear.

Catarrh manifests itself by inflammation of the delicate membranes of the nose and air passages, which choke up and make breathing very difficult. To get rid of these distressing effects you must remove their cause.

Don't be misled into thinking your Catarrh is gone. The first touch of winter weather will bring it back with all of its discomforts.

The blood is laden with the Catarrh germs, which direct their attack against the tender and delicate membranes of the nose and throat. These germs cannot be reached by sprays or douches, which, of course, have no effect whatever upon the blood.

Mild weather will aid the treatment and this is an excellent time to thoroughly cleanse the blood of the germs of Catarrh and be forever rid of the troublesome sprays and douches that can only relieve you for the time.

S. S. S. is a purely vegetable remedy, made from roots and herbs direct from the forest, which combat promptly disease germs or impurities in the blood. This great remedy has been used for more than fifty years, with most satisfactory results. It has been successfully used by those afflicted with even the severest cases of Catarrh. It relieves catarrh by treating the disease at its source. S. S. S. is sold by druggists everywhere.

For the benefit of those afflicted with catarrh or other blood diseases, we maintain a medical department in charge of a specialist skilled in these diseases. If you will write us fully, we will give your case careful study, and write you just what your own individual case requires. No charge is made for this service. New York, September 3.—Apprehensions of a continued light export demand during the period of increasing new crop receipts seemed to be largely responsible for renewed weakness in the cotton market today.

December contracts sold off from 31.45 to 30.25, or 92 points from last night's closing figures, and closed at 30.52, with the general list closing steady at a net loss of 50 to 70 points.

Advances during the early trading reflected a firmer technical position after yesterday's break, relatively steady cables and the firm opening of the stock market. First prices were 3 to 17 points higher on all months except May, which was 6 points lower, and the active positions sold 25 to 33 points above last night's closing figures before the end of the morning.

The disposition to cover was increased by the absence of hedge selling during the earlier trading, but southern offerings became more active later. This encouraged a renewal of local pressure and there was heavy liquidation on the afternoon break, which carried October off from 31.13 to 30.00 and January from 31.40 to 30.20, with the general list showing a net loss of 76 to 94 points.

The weakness in the grain market and the opinions expressed in various quarters that the crest of high living costs had been reached were considered responsible for some of the Wall street and western selling. The feature most generally emphasized, however, was the unfavorable financial situation abroad as an obstacle to export buying and the increased weight of new crop cotton to be expected with the advance of the season. The close showed rallies of some 20 to 25 points on covering.

The weekly report of the weather bureau indicating favorable crop progress seemed to have little immediate effect, but probably added to the confidence of sellers on the decline.

SPOTS IN NEW YORK.

New York, September 3.—Spot cotton quiet; middling 30.75.

NEW ORLEANS FALLS UNDER HEAVY SELLING

New Orleans, September 3.—Very heavy selling was felt by the cotton market around the middle of the session today and declines of over a cent a pound resulted.

Pressure was carried into the afternoon, but it abruptly ceased on the appearance of a storm warning, occasioned by the appearance in tropical waters of a disturbance of unknown intensity and direction, and something of a recovery came about toward the close. Final prices showed net losses for the day of 60 to 66 points.

The opening was higher on a better Liverpool market than due, but the early rise amounted to only 3 to 12 points. Moderate selling came in and the market fell off until it stood 3 points under yesterday's close. At first the weekly crop reports had but little effect on values, although they were regarded as favorable, and the market rose to a net advance of 20 to 30 points on talk of small ginning to the first of September.

Gradually the favorable features in the weekly crop returns by the government increased offerings and finally aggressive selling for short account appeared. Under it prices fel about $6 a bale from the topmost levels on the most active months. At the lowest the market stood 78 to 90 points under the close of yesterday. December, at its best, stood at 31c, and at its lowest at 29.80.

BETTER PROGRESS MADE IN GEORGIA, WEEKLY BULLETIN

Washington, September 3.—Temperature averaged near normal and rainfall was generally light to moderate in most sections of the cotton belt, according to the weekly bulletin of the department of agriculture today.

Cotton made fairly good progress as a result, except in portions of North Carolina, in Florida and in the south-central portion of the belt in which it was mostly poor. Fair progress was made in Georgia, said the report, and cotton was opening rapidly in the central and southern portions of the state. Picking has progressed northward to central South Carolina, but the work has made slow advances in the lower Mississippi valley, where the crop is late and opening slowly.

Summary for the Cotton Region States.

New Orleans, La., September 3.—Temperatures continued from 5 to 10 degrees below the seasonal average except in western Texas and extreme western Oklahoma, where day temperatures ranged from 90 to 96 degrees. No rainfall was reported except moderate showers along the Atlantic coast. Special reports from the Vicksburg district are missing.—Cline.

Summary of Weather and Crop Conditions in the Cotton Belt for the Week Ending September 2, 1919.

Washington, D. C., September 3.—Temperatures averaged about normal, and precipitation light to moderate in most sections was favorable for cotton. The progress of cotton was generally about normal, except in parts of North Carolina, in Florida and in the south-central portions of the belt, where progress was mostly poor. The progress was irregular in North Carolina, being mostly poor, and varied from rather poor to good in South Carolina, but poor progress was made in Florida. The progress of cotton was about normal in Georgia, but generally poor in southern Alabama and was poor to normal in Mississippi. Cotton made fairly good advance in Tennessee, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas, but damage by weevils and worms continued rather extensive in the eastern half of Texas, and damage by weevils and worms continued rather extensive in Louisiana and in many southern districts to the eastward. Conditions continue rather poor in many sections of the belt. Picking and ginning are progressing in southern districts. Favorable weather prevailed for planting and growth of late truck in most southern states, and late corn made fairly good progress.—Marvin.

Synopsis of Weather and Crop Conditions in Georgia for the Week Ending Tuesday, September 2, 1919.

Atlanta, Ga., September 3.—Fine weather, with abundant sunshine, was general during the past week. Some local rains fell, especially in the northwest, on the 29th, and very undesirable precipitation occurred again at the close of the week in the extreme south (September 1) under the influence of a disturbance in the east gulf. In the southern division, including the coast districts, where the rainfall during the entire summer has been excessive, prospects for any improvement in crops is past. In the northern part of the state autumn-like conditions seem to be approaching early. Sweet potatoes are generally good, and digging is under way on a small scale; showers would benefit this crop in the north. The end of the tobacco season is approaching. Making hay is now under way, with excellent yields in the central and southern divisions. Sugar cane is fair to good. Digging peanuts continues. Fall gardens are generally poor, though turnips continue to be planted. Corn promises a fair to good yield; fodder pulling is general. The absence of rain and abundant sunshine during most of the week caused cotton to open rapidly; picking is advancing actively in the central and southern divisions of the state; ginning also is proceeding rapidly. Much cotton is small in the northern division, but is beginning to open in that section also. Reports of damage by weevils continue to be received, chiefly from central counties. The final indications are for a generally poor yield of cotton.

SPECIALTIES RUN HIGH ON 'CHANGE

Powerful Speculative Interests Dominate Stock Market—Crucible Steel Heads List of Rising Specialties.

New York, September 3.—Trading on the stock exchange today ran mainly to specialties under control of powerful speculative interests, half a score of those issues contributing extensvely to the very active and sensational operations of the session.

Chief among these was Crucible Steel, which scored a further rise of 17½ points to 194¾, a new high record and an advance of almost 50 points over its final price of a week ago.

Buying of Crucible suggested something more than a mere rout of the shorts, but so far as could be learned there was nothing on which to base widely circulated rumors of a "corner" in that stock.

The next most conspicuous issue was Baldwin Locomotive, in which there was an enormous turn-over at an extreme rise of 16¾ points, accompanied by gains of 3 to 10 points in other equipments and steels, also affiliated shares.

Less extensive gains were made by motors and oils, these in a few instances being altogether effaced in the later dealings, despite the increased dividends declared on Mexican and Pan-American Petroleums.

American Woolen, Barrett company, leathers, shippings and tobaccos participated in the upward movement at extreme gains of 2 to 8 points, a few unclassified specialties, deriving almost equal benefits.

Rails opened with a show of strength on publication of official figures foreshadowing best earnings, wage increases excluded since last September, but this improvement was forfeited, excepting among minor issues, where the inquiry was well sustained.

Bonds were firm to strong on moderate dealings, with a better inquiry for rails. Liberty 3½'s touched par. Total sales, par value, $10,575,000. Old United States bonds were unchanged on call.

Situation in Stocks Has Experts Baffled

BY R. L. BARNUM

(The Constitution-Philadelphia Public Ledger Service. Copyright, 1919.)

New York, September 3.—The advance in stocks has reached a point where most brokerage houses wash their hands of responsibility for it. Anything is likely to happen, say the expert advisers. Twenty points more may be piled on top of the 20 points which many industrials have gained, or there may be a bad smash. Those who have been persistently bearish are in a peculiarly trying position, yet they feel that to be consistent they must maintain their position. The more optimistic admit that they are not anxious to buy stocks at present prices.

One thing that the market is quite plainly reflecting is the change in the labor situation. The rule of reason, long applied by the courts to the monopolistic corporations, has apparently been taken to heart, for the moment at least, by the labor unions. A good deal is expected to come from next month's industrial conference called by the president, when capital, labor and other classes of the community will thresh out their problems.

Railroad men and bankers continue reluctant to come out in print in regard to the Cummins railroad bill. They prefer to leave all comment to Mr. Cuyler, of the railway executives' committee. In stock market circles opinion is rather sharply divided. In some quarters emphasis is laid on the fact that rates will be determined by a governmental body whose conception of a "fair return" on capital in the past has not altogether met Wall street's approval. But others assert that the Cummins bill contains the germ of an idea, one of many ideas, that is likely to be worked out satisfactorily in the give and take of congressional amendment and public discussion. The outlawing of strikes on the railroad is one feature that gives general satisfaction.

A large number of new issues of notes and preferred stocks is being brought out. Investment dealers think they detect a somewhat better demand for such things. There has been some improvement in the tone of Liberty bonds, which had been undergoing a long decline since early summer.

Crucible Steel Again.

Who is buying Crucible Steel, and why, are questions that are agitating Wall street. The shares, which closed at 177¼ yesterday, shot up to 194¾ today. People who remember the performance of General Motors and the periodic punishment of the short interests in that issue say that a similar situation exists in Crucible. One of the best known speculators in Wall street, who is held accountable for nearly every movement that Wall street is at a loss to explain otherwise, is said to be the chief sufferer in Crucible. One estimate has it that some 50,000 shares of the stock have been taken out of the market in recent months, thereby bringing about a sharp reduction in the floating supply.

Crucible's stock market record is almost as sensational as that of Bethlehem Steel or the Northern Pacific of other years. In 1903 Crucible sold at 3⅛ on the Pittsburg stock exchange. Ten years later it sold no higher than 17½. In 1914 its range was between 11½ and 17. but in 1915, with the war boom in progress, it jumped from 12¼ to 109⅞. Last year it sold between 52 and 74⅞, while this year the range has been from 52⅛ to 194¾. The surprising thing is that the present prices are about 85 points above the halcyon days of war boom itself.

Banking circles are still puzzled over the reported action of the Bank of England in reducing the interest allowed on foreign balances at London from 4½ to 3 per cent. The natural effect of such a course would be to cause foreigners to withdraw their funds from the British market, but the fact that sterling exchange has had such a severe decline makes it impossible to withdraw these balances without suffering a high loss. It is suggested in some quarters that the money thus imprisoned in London might be invested in British securities, but the interest or dividends collected on such investments would be paid in the depreciating sterling exchange, which is apparently deterring American investors from buying London issues, until there is some evidence that the decline in exchange rates has run its course.

Again the handwriting on the wall makes its appearance on the New York curb market. For some time past the public has been clamoring for new and untried issues in that market. This has been going on to a greater extent recently than during the four war years, when there were many new issues put out of supposed war order concerns, in which the public has lost millions of dollars. One of the recent favorites which made its appearance on the market was Savold Tire. Speculation in these shares was enormous at the time of their introduction and the tip was sent broadcast to buy Savold Tire. So active was the demand for the issue that less than a month ago the stock sold up above 75. Today the shares were quoted at 15 bid, 30 offered with very few buyers. Actual sales were made at 20. Of course there are many meritorious issues on the curb in which investors have made money, but this is just another instance where the public has gotten the wrong end of the rope.

Union Bag and Paper.

The shares of the Union Bag and Paper company are unusually inactive and for this reason many people stay out of the stock. But trading in the issues was more active today at advancing prices, due to the reports that there is possibility of another extra dividend to be paid in liberty bonds before the end of the year. The company has already paid two per cent extra this year. These rumors of another dividend are based on the belief that the St. Maurice Paper company, limited, the Canadian subsidiary of the Union Bag and Paper company, which has been piling up earnings because of the high price which it is receiving for its products will declare another cash dividend, and this will go mostly to the Union. The Canadian company is a large producer of news print paper and record prices have been paid for this during recent years.

The dividend meetings of both the American Can company and the Continental Can company which were scheduled for this week, have been postponed until next week, according to reports today. In the case of the Continental Can the directors will hold their meeting on September 8 and at that time it is expected that the dividend rate will be placed on a 7 per cent annual basis, as compared with 5 per cent now being paid. The stock has been strong of late in anticipation of this. As for a dividend payment on American Can, the opinion prevails that no payment will be made at the present time. The directors of the American Car and Foundry company will meet at 3 o'clock on Thursday, and at that time it is expected that the rate on this stock will be increased from 8 to 12 per cent annually, according to rumors that have been circulated for some time past.

Coffee.

New York, September 3.—Early rallies were followed by renewed weakness in the market for coffee futures, owing to further declines in Brazil and continued liquidation. The opening was 5 points higher to 4 points lower and December sold up 17.70 during the early trading, or about 6 points net higher. Aside from scattered covering after the break yesterday, there was little support, however, and a special cable reporting declines in Santos futures led to renewed selling. December broke to 17.00 and March to 16.94, or about 60 to 64 points net lower, and the close showed a net loss of 58 to 63 points. September, 17.43; October, 17.32; December, 17.03; January, 16.98; March, 16.93; May, 16.88; July, 16.82.

Spot coffee dull and irregular; Rio 7's, 18¾; Santos, 27¾. Cost and freight offers were reported unchanged to a shade higher, including Santos 4's at 29.00 to 29.40, and Rio 7's, 20.90, London credits.

The official cables reported a decline of 125 reis in the Rio market. The Santos spot market was unchanged for 4's, but 500 reis lower for 7's. The early cable was unchanged to 125 reis higher for Santos futures, but later a decline of 175 to 225 reis was reported. Receipts at the two Brazilian ports, 34,000; Jundiahy receipts, 16,000.

DRASTIC SETBACK IN GRAIN MARKET

Prospect of Lower Prices Generally Sends Corn Crashing Downward. Oats and Provisions Suffer Substantial Losses.

Chicago, September 3.—Drastic new setbacks in the value of corn took place today largely as a result of assertions which received widespread notice that the crest of the high cost of living had been passed and that a considerable drop was in prospect.

After an extreme break that compared with yesterday's finish, reached 8½c a bushel in some cases, the market closed nervous, 2c to 5½c net lower, with September $1.67 to $1.67¼, and December $1.31¼ to $1.31½. Oats finished ⅜c to ⅞c down, and provisions unchanged to a loss of $1.02.

New low levels for the season were reached by the December and May deliveries of corn. The new records showed that prices for the two months named had depreciated about 25 per cent during the last few weeks. Lack of support rather than aggressive selling was responsible for the intensified weakness today. It was pointed out in in this connection that a nearly uninterrupted advance of seven months had preceded the recent decline.

Although sentiment at the close was a little more mixed than has been the case of late, the buying power appeared on the whole to be still limited to shorts who were in a position to take profits.

PROFESSIONAL VIEWS ON COTTON SITUATION

New York, September 3—(Special.)—Early in the day the buying of distant months, presumably for large spinning interests, had the effect of holding the market steady. The outside business, however, was very small, and late in the afternoon a wave of liquidation and some southern selling occasioned a decline of about 100 points, with the tone unsettled. Until the foreign exchange situation shows a marked recovery we do not expect any large export. Should the market decline below 30 cnts for December we think well of buying for a moderate turn, although we do not anticipate any sustained advance until general economic and labor conditions become reassuring.
J. W. JAY & CO.

New York, September 3.—(Special.)—Sales of six thousand bales in Liverpool, the heaviest in three months, shows very clearly the foreign market is in need of cotton, and will buy on the slightest recession. The break in American markets was due to the liquidation of one long, dangerous speculative account. The break of the past two days has clarified the situation very much, leaving the market in a much better technical position. Spot centers in the south report no cotton for sale at the decline.
CLARK & CO.

New York, September 3.—(Special.)—The market was very quiet today up until the last hour, when selling oreders made their appearance from Wall street and the west, causing a sharp decline. The selling was brought about by the statement of a prominent western business man that the peak of high prices had been seen in many lines and that there would be a gradual decline in values. As the sentiment has been quite bearish for some little time, there was little buying power in the market until the 30-cnt level was reached, at which point spinners and trade interests again bought, thus relieving the pressure. Naturally, this break today has increased the bearish feeling in the market, as the trade see no signs of fresh speculative buying and feel that there is not likely to be any unless crop conditions should become suddenly worse.
HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, September 3.—(Special.)—The features of today's cotton market were a rather favorable weekly weather report and short selling by Wall street on the belief that the south will sell new cotton at the best obtainable prices. Just before the closing rumors of a West Indian storm firmed up prices. The intensity of the storm is not known, but should it develop into serious proportions the market should reflect its presence by an advance.
ORVIS BROTHERS & CO.

NEW ORLEANS LETTER.

New Orleans, September 3.—(Special.)—The expected happened today when cotton broke over a hundred points after the trade had digested the favorable weekly crop reports from the government. Their effect was all the more marked because of the dry weather map and the forecast of dry weather in every state in the belt. Selling was checked late in the day by warning of a disturbance in the Caribbean sea, just south of Porto Rico.

It cannot be said whether this storm will be of importance or not, as the intensity and direction of it are yet unknown. Like the first disturbance of this season, which never reached the Gulf of Mexico, it does not come into sight like a regulation hurricane.

The daily cotton region summary said: "There was no rainfall in the belt except moderate showers along the Atlantic coast."

The Constitution's Markets, Business and Financial News

Arteries of Commerce Blocked in All Europe

BY FRANK A. VANDERLIP.

If there were nothing else the matter with Europe except the breakdown of railway transportation, most of the European nations would still be facing a problem of gigantic proportions, the early settlement of which is not only essential to the resumption of industrial life, but is actually essential to maintaining life itself in some of the large centers. Hundreds of thousands of people have starved to death in the last twelve months in Europe. I am not using figures as it is said Lloyd-George does, merely as adjectives. There is competent authority for such a statement. This terrible catastrophe has only in part been caused by lack of food. In an important measure the disaster was directly traceable to the breakdown in transportation, to the physical inability to move stores of existing food into localities where people were dying of starvation. At one time there were a hundred unloaded cargoes of food in the harbor of Marseilles, held there because preceding cargoes were blocking the lines of transportation.

The railroads of Spain were, on the whole, in much better condition than I expected to find them. In France the system has wonderfully stood the test of the enormous movement which has been imposed upon it. But equipment is deficient, and much of it unbelievably ancient. Added to that is the ineffectual system of handling the traffic. One of our high military officers described the dispatching of a freight car, say from Brest to Paris, as comparable with dropping a letter in a mail box. Some time, presumably, the car would arrive at its destination, but in the meantime there was no record of its whereabouts.

No matter how important it was to have it reach its destination, no way existed to trace it, and it might get lost on a side track for a month. The situation in France or even in Belgium is by no means illustrative of the situation further east. It is true that in Belgium the Germans took up practically all double track, even on the principal main through lines, and have left but a single track for all traffic. Literally hundreds of masonry bridges have been destroyed in Belgium and northern France. It is easy to say that all this damage can be readily repaired, and so it can in time.

Equipment Dilapidated.

My point is that it has not been repaired and at the present moment the tremendous handicap resulting from an inability promptly to move freight would alone be an enormously disorganizing factor to the industrial life of these countries.

As one goes further east, however, the transportation system is found to be far more seriously disorganized. It is true that there has now been established some through services that might be taken to indicate a return to normal railroading conditions. One can travel from Paris to Warsaw, or to Belgrade, Bucharest or Constantinople. When it comes to transporting freight through the whole district east and south of Germany and of old Austria-Hungary, the situation assumes serious aspects. Serbia was swept almost clean of all railway equipment. I was told that at the date of the armistice there were but nine locomotives left in Serbia.

The situation is bad in Greece as well as in Rumania, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland and Lithuania. In Russia the locomotives seem to have been run until they ceased to function and then were deserted, little, if any, effort being made at repairs, and it is here that there are the most notable examples of starvation and ample food supplies not distantly separated.

I have the highest possible authority for the prediction that the food situation will be more serious in the spring and summer of 1920 than it has been this year, and indeed that it will be so serious that, taking into account the breakdown of transportation, it will be impossible to prevent another horror of starvation even if the ports of Europe are amply supplied with food.

I am not arguing that this whole situation cannot be readily put to rights, but I do say that no substantial start has yet been made to do so, that even no systematic plan has yet been developed, and that under the very best of conditions, the task is one that will consume a great deal of time. In the interval the transportation situation presents a most serious obstacle to the distribution of food and necessities, and makes doubly difficult the restarting of industry. Among all of Europe's needs, none is more poignant than the rehabilitation of her railroads.

Locomotive 61 Years Old.

Occasionally I had an interview that was so rich in material and that was given under such circumstances that I could make very brief running notes. I find in my notebook, which indeed is a lamentably scanty and scrappy one, the notes of an interview I have had with a man who has made a great success on two continents and knows thoroughly from personal experience the railroad conditions in America, England and in Europe, and who has rendered distinguished service throughout the war. My talk with him ranged over many subjects. Portions of the interview would logically fall in various chapters of this book, but perhaps it will be as interesting and readable to try to give an outline of what he had to say without any attempt at logical arrangement.

"In France the railroad tariff is fixed by law. It is now admittedly too low, but there has been an indisposition materially to increase it, just as there has been an indisposition materially to increase taxes. The result is a sad deficiency in income and a serious decline in the physical condition of the rolling stock. The French railroads seem never to scrap rolling stock. I have seen a locomotive regularly running on a French railroad that bore the date 1857 on its nameplate. That locomotive would be in a museum in America. Its boiler tubes were all of copper. It is today in regular operation. The way in which France has conserved its old rolling stock makes me wonder if Americans have not gone mad on rebuilding railroads.

"Economical as is the management of the French lines, their income at the present too low rates is not sufficient to keep up properly their physical condition. The allies have paid the Nord railway three million pounds on account, and that is all that has kept the road going. The finances of all the French roads are bad.

"In France a tremendous amount will have to be spent to restore the railroads to a good physical condition. The problem is by no means insurmountable, but France will have to put up rates. Everything that a railroad buys has gone up and there must be an advance in the price of what it has to sell. If the French railroad managers would only introduce some kind of efficiency, if they would learn to do some things in the way they have seen them done under American and English direction, their position would be much easier. I think after the Americans and English have gone home the French will introduce a better system, but they dislike to do that under the eyes of the foreigners.

England Finds Remedy.

"In England an extraordinarily happy arrangement was made at the very outbreak of the war. The British government took over 95 per cent of the railroad lines, guaranteeing them the same net return as they made in 1913. The government allows the same amount to be spent on upkeep and charged to operating expenses as was spent in 1913, plus 20 per cent, the 20 per cent being allowed to cover the increased cost of material and labor. There was so much difficulty in getting labor that one million pounds of this upkeep fund is unexpended.

"The passenger rates in England were increased 50 per cent, not so much to get additional revenue as to prevent travel. Freight rates were not materially raised. Much traffic that had formerly moved by water had to be moved by rail, and this made new tariffs necessary and increased the business of the railroads. There was formed a railroad executive committee, made up of eleven or twelve managers. The president of the board of trade was the nominal head, but he was not active. No conclusion was put into force without the unanimous consent of this executive committee. They were broad-minded in their attitude and did not hamper the government, and the result is that there has been built up no controversy between the government and the managers.

"In an unguarded moment, the government promised the unions that it would sympathetically consider an eight-hour day. With the armistice the unions immediately came forward and demanded an eight-hour day at once. Lloyd-George, Sir Albert Auckland, Stanley Geddes and Sir Herbert Walker all made promises before election that are now difficult to carry out. During the war hours ranged from ten to twelve a day, and sometimes there were cases of men working sixteen hours a day. An eight-hour day would add £25,000,000 annually to th eoperating expenses. The present increase of wages over the prewar total is £55,000,000, so that if an eight-hour day is granted on top of the present wages, the operating costs for labor alone will be £80,000,000 more than prior to the war.

English Public Divided.

"Standardization, co-operation and the operation of all the roads as one system will save about £15,000,000 per annum, leaving £55,000,000 to be met by increased rates. Railway economists agree that this cannot be done. It means doubling the expense. Winston Churchill before election promised nationalization. His unauthorized promise was not denied until after the election. Now England is to have a new ministry of ways and transportation, but as yet no definite government policy has been announced.

"The English public is divided upon the subject of nationalization. The subject, however, is not so complicated as it is in America. The difference between the railroad situation in the United States and in England lies in the fact that there is no vindictiveness in England between the government, the railways and labor. There has been no such acts in England as the taking away of private cars, or the reducing of salaries of managers. The English public always stands for fair play. 'Is it cricket?' is a question ever in the minds of Englishmen. In America the policy of legislators and of the interstate commerce commission has often been vindictive. England will probably be slow in making its final decision in regard to the railroads. It is the habit there to consider public questions carefully; but in the end it will be fairly considered and the owners of railroad securities will be treated fairly.

Against Political Influence.

"Personally, I think the government ought to get out of the railroad business. Political influences will always hamper its policy of management. I doubt if railroads can ever be publicly run successfully in a democracy, although perhaps they can in an autocracy.

"I have been spending some time in Belgium. You can discount somewhat the Belgian hard luck stories. The Belgian is inclined to exploit his misery. It is true that certain towns were wiped out, but all were not. Belgian agriculture is better than it was before the war. The Belgian children have been well fed. Keep an eye on Belgium. Her industries may revive first in Europe, and she has great ability in the industrial field.

"Here in France industry is handicapped in many ways. The Frenchman is jealous and suspicious of his neighbors. He is an individualist and does not like to co-operate. The genius of the French is for small business. They do not want Americans or English to come in to do business in France. That policy is undoubtedly a mistake. They ought to welcome the energy and brains of outsiders who would help them to get going. There has been enough altruism and amateur charity in regard to France.

"What France ought to do is to let capital and brains flow in and give vitality to her whole industrial life. She should do away with her restrictions. But, in fact, she has become more Chauvinistic than ever. Do not be deceived, however, by the possibility of recovery in France. France has been very sick, but there is nothing wrong with her constitution. Foreigners can do business in France, if they will only learn how to go about it. Americans particularly do not know how to deal with Frenchmen. Americans are too direct and too blunt.

"No Frenchman wants to talk business in the first interview, and much of the business of France is done by indirection. One must take time to find out where the lines lie and in direct contact never take a Frenchman too seriously. The field of industry in France would be difficult for an outsider, but in the field of finance there is unlimited opportunity.

Brains and Capital Needed.

"You ask what America should be doing in Europe. Europe is fairly crying for brains and capital. There are possibilities everywhere, and there are particular possibilities in some of the by-ways of Europe that capital does not think of. Portugal is one. Clear-sighted engineers with a business sense would find many opportunities in Portugal, and in Spain. There are great mineral resources there and an excellent climate.

"One of the old regions of the world, Mesopotamia, will be made to flourish like a green bay tree if a little capital and some brains would get hold of the situation and revive the irrigation system of ages ago. In the Balkans and in the East there are coal and oil to be developed. In Rumania there are mineral and agricultural possibilities. The Germans made no mistake in selecting the Near East as a place for investment. They organized banks there, and the banker did not take chances. He knew what he was about. There is a banking vacuum from the Adriatic east.

Urges Investigation.

"If America will study these opportunities and will link imagination with an actual knowledge of exsting condtions, she can, with her ways of dealing with things, make a new world out of these backward countries. The greatest export America could send to those countries would be men with a knowledge of construction, of finance and of management. These countries have had bad government so long that there is no impetus left in the native people and they have made no progress, in spite of having natural resources that would have supported great development.

"The course for America to follow is, first, to investigate, to prospect, then to construct, retaining an interest in the junior securities, and keeping the operation in their own hands. There is an enormous field for profit to Americans and for service to these people."

There seems to me much sound suggestion in this interview, as well as informing discussion of the European railroad situation.

FARM LANDS!

"The volume of offerings on farm land through our weekly market bulletin," states this week's bulletin of the State Bureau of Markets, "has grown to such an extent that it now becomes necessary for us to adopt the policy of carrying such farm-land notices once each month instead of weekly, as we have done in the past. We realize that the department of our bulletin is of very great importance and we intend to increase our efforts to find a purchaser for every Georgia farm offered. On the other hand, we are convinced that the change we are making will benefit our entire bulletin service.

"We want our friends to continue to send in their farm-land notices, and at regular intervals we will have such notices printed. We will carry on a publicity campaign in addition, and ask buyers to write this office, and your offerings on farm lands will be sent out immediately on receipt of such requests. Then, as above stated, once each month the entire list will be printed and sent out with our regular bulletin of that date.

"This farm-land department is becoming one of the most important in our market bulletin, and we want it to continue to grow. Be sure to send in your notices on farms for sale just as you have in the past."

Sugar.

New York, September 3.—The raw sugar market was unchanged at 7.28 for centrifugal to the refiner. The board reported no purchases.

In refined, conditions are improved owing to the more liberal arrivals, but refiners are still far behind on old orders and little new business, if any, is being accepted as yet. Prices are unchanged at 9c for fine granulated.

MOTORMAN INJURED IN COLLISION TODAY

J. W. Hindmond, of 54 Larkin street, a motorman in the employ of the Georgia Railway and Power company, was badly hurt and several passengers bruised when a street car crashed into a switch engine of the Southern railway early this morning at the crossing on Stewart avenue.

He was carried to the Atlanta hospital, where his injuries were pronounced serious. Witnesses say that the motorman apparently did not see the engine and crashed into it.

Sumter Begins Fight Against Boll Weevil By Burning Stalks

Americus, Ga., September 3—(Special.)—George O. Marshall, county farm demonstration agent, has begun a campaign to have all cotton stalks in Sumter county destroyed as soon as the last lock of cotton has been picked by growers.

"Now is the time to make an effective fight on the boll weevil," Marshall said today, "and if the farmers in Sumter county will begin destroying their cotton stalks immediately, it will mean many additional bales of staple next fall.

Destroy the cotton stalks as soon as the last lock of cotton is picked, and the longer before frost this can be done, the more effective will be the work, according to Marshall. Destruction of cotton stalks after frost does not mean anything, he says, for weevils that will be ready for the next year's crop will already have gone into hibernation.

It is not necessary, Mr. Marshall says, to turn the stalks under at this time, inasmuch as the idea is to deprive weevils of anything to feed upon just before they go into hibernation. Weevils cannot feed on dead plants, he says, and a weevil that goes into hibernation with his stomach empty, cannot survive during the winter.

CARRANZA CAUSES MEXICAN ATTACKS

It is only the beginning of further similar attacks to emphasize, with American-made cartridges in the hands of Mexico's licensed bandits, the long line of Mexican insults to the Stars and Stripes, that have been climaxed by this latest Carranza message.

That Carranza did not write the message is not significant; that a shrewd designing Carranza dictator like Cabrera is responsible for this defiance, and the cry about "Mexican sovereignty" when there is no such thing, does not count.

Carranza Turns on Benefactor.

That Carranza is a weak and almost functionless tool, in a house of Mexican "generals," with whom he has surrounded himself, is merely incidental. The fact is the "individual sovereignty" of Venustiano Carranza, recognized and supported as a "national sovereignty" by the United States government, has turned upon its benefactor with the ferocity of a jungle beast. It is now paying with gunpowder and lead the debt of gratitude for the naval retreat from Tampico, for permitting Carranzistas to march with arms through the border states, in a camouflaged attack upon Villa, for furnishing Carranzistas openly and above board enormous stores of arms and munitions, for marching into Mexico with punitive expeditions, so thoroughly lacking in firmness, that a hasty retreat had to be made, if a Carranza "general" said "pooh." Yes, this is compensation for the recognition of one notorious revolutionist over another, in the establishment of a de facto government when the basic tenet of a revolutionits in Mexico is either banditry or graft.

That the unprovoked attack on Captain McNabb and his aide constitutes the opening wedge in this international crisis, is the opinion of well informed Americans here, and on the north side of the river, with whom I have talked.

Trouble Is Predicted.

Already the flying squadrons at Laredo and Eagle Pass are being strengthened from Kelly field and six new machines landed in Eagle Pass last night for border patrol, and were today swinging up and down the Rio Grande. The once smouldering volcano is beginning to lick both sides of the border, with its shafts of flame, and if the government of the United States does not more strenuously resent the insults of the Carranza and his house of "generals" and their ragged army of thugs, assassins and cattle rustlers, who are licensed by the Carranza badge to wreak their vengeance upon Americans, then I am here to say the last rod of patience will break and people along the American side of the border, in Texas, New Mexico and Arizona, will feel constrained to take matters in their own hands, through their own vigilance committees.

The outside world has no conception of what is taking place along the Mexican border. Aviators are fired upon at one point or another almost daily. Cattle rustling by Mexican bandits is goin on all the time. The Carranzistas hate the United States and sneer at it for its lack of forceful and aggressive action in dealing with the situation. They unhesitatingly refer to the fact that General Pershing had Francisco Villa cornered at Parral, in the state of Chihuahua in 1916, and yet, was forced to turn his back upon the supposed quest of the expedition. It is true, and Mexicans all know it. General Pershing was operating under two orders, one to capture dead or alive Francisco Villa, the other not to antagonize or conflict with the Carranzista troops.

What Stopped Pershing.

When General Pershing's men had their prey to quarte and closed in on him, it was a Carranza "general" who sent a message to the major in immediate command of the battalion, not to proceed further toward the Carranza lines, otherwise he would be compelled to order fire, and the Americans, with Villa in their grasp, could do nothing but retreat. Did the Carranzistas take Villa? No, they dared not attempt it. But they protected him from the American sodliers, who had him cornered. These facts and the subsequent fruitless, punitive expeditions are some of the reasons why the Mexican has learned to talk and act with defiance toward Americans.

It is why Carranza himself, with all of Mexico crumbling in ruin and with here industries paralyzed, a poor tool that he is, in the hands of a coterie of his hot-headed military henchmen, feels that he can continue to insult the United States with unrestrained impugnity.

It is why he has instituted basic laws confiscating American property, and it is essentially the reason for his revolutionary and bolshevic principle of "nationalizing Mexico's several products" when as a matter of fact, there is absolutely no major industry of any kind in Mexico conducted by Mexicans, or with Mexican capital.

Foreigners Own All Industries.

The oil and metal operations, lumber mills, sugar mills, every industry of every kind that amounts to anything, is foreign, having been encouraged into Mexico years ago by the broad and progressive development policies of Porfirio Diaz, and subsequently, dissipated, closed, or confiscated or impaired by the socalled "nationalization" policy of the revolutionary chief, who is now in charge of the government machinery.

But the end is in sight, and such defiance as that at Lareda, in accentuating with lead the Mexican hatred for the United States as reflected in the Carranza message, is the beginning of that end. I have already told in this dispatch that Britian and France served notice on President Wilson in Paris, that unless the United States cleaned up Mexico, European intervention would result. Mr. Wilson's policy has changed toward Mexico as I also said, and every military move on the American side of the border today is a preparation for the eventuality.

It is coming just as certain as daylight follows night. It may not come as armed intervention. It may come as a blockade of the ports. In that event, in sixty days the United States could establish in Mexico the groundwork for a stable and safe government of and for and by Mexicans. And that is the only purpose that any American has.

Socialism Rife in Mexico.

Mexico today is not only steeped in revolution and in licensed and unlicensed outlawry, with only a paper government at best, but it is also writhing in the throes of socialism and anarchy. Drastic socialism is being encouraged by the Carranzistas. It is politics at this moment, to be sure, that the "red" is sweeping over Mexico as it never has before by reason of the abetting influences in Mexico City.

Germany is openly charged with insidiously planting the seed of Bolshevism in Mexico, but it is more apt to be only Carranzistas, most of whom are German sympathizers, doing it. Just today great printed placards in Spanish, with a single red flag at the top, which is the signal flag of fire and hatred, are being posted all over this Mexican city.

They call for socialistic gatherings to discuss labor matters, and declare that socialism must guide the destinies of Mexico in this day of turmoil.

In the meantime Carranzistas are being supplied every week with American-made arms and ammunition, despite the embargo issued four weeks ago against the same. The shipment of arms and munitions into Mexico have been by war trade board licenses, stipulating a gross amount of rifles, revolvers and cartridges, etc., on each license.

Arms for Bandits.

These licenses were issued for six months. These permits, issued prior to the date of the embargo on which there are uncalled export allowances, are good to the Mexican limit of the permits. Hence hundreds of thousands of rounds of cartridges are going into Mexico weekly through these border ports, and into the hands of these very same Carranza bandits who target practice on American aviators flying, even on the American side of the river.

All of this illustrates the utter lack of regulation and of even a semblance of stabilized government in Mexico.

I repeat, there is no national sovereignty, but only individual sovereignty. The country is overrun with brigands, not the least of whom are Carranza soldiers.

Revolutionary leaders are beginning to organize for their fall and winter campaigns, and will be particularly strong this year and next spring by reason of the approaching so-called election within the Carranza ring.

Carranzistas hate the United States, and have lost respect for it, by reason of the lack of resentment of the insults heaped upon her.

The average Mexican knows nothing about diplomacy. He believes an insult should mean a fight, and if the insulted party does not fight, then he regards him as a coward.

Contempt for United States.

In the ignorance of the Mexican people, this idea regarding America has been welded into them. The children are taught that the United States is afraid of Mexico, and the only spirit they are taught to cultivate is that of contempt for the Stars and Stripes. The only real friends the United States has in Mexico today are indeed from among the revolutionary bandit chiefs. Pelaez is a friend of the United States, and the great oil wells at Tampico are permitted to flow only by the police protection furnished them by this celebrated anti-Carranza revolutionist.

Villa was a friend. He is not openly one today, and can hardly be expected to be, in the face of past circumstances; but, at that, he is a better friend with less diplomacy than Carranza. And so is Felix Diaz.

In the meantime, while the lack of an aggressive Mexican policy on the part of the United States has promoted in Mexico a spirit of disrespect in one element and a spirit of official and shotgun defiance in another, the better class of Mexican tradesmen and professional and those with intelligence and foresight, and who are not profiting by the legalized thievery of the Carranza regime, are anxious, indeed praying, for the United States to take some definite steps and restore a government and rehabilitate business.

Even Cabrera Takes Alarm.

Even an astute politician like Luis Cabrera, the dictator who controls Carranza like the master controls a peon, is quoted from Mexico City today as saying: "In congress the election is the only thing discussed. The fever has broken out in the public offices, and the contagion has spread to the army also. This stae of affairs will bring consequences to the stability of the government, and therefore to the work of pacifying the country. While the rebels and the bandits are devoting their time to pillage and attacking this or that town, the military men are engaged in political disputes or the work of electioneering. As the two candidates are military men, the election will take on the characteristics of a military engagement. Both factions will endeavor to mobilize their supporters and organize them for the elections in such manner that it will be equivalent to dividing the country into zones of military influence. Under such conditions it is impossible to believe that real elections can be held. If the elections are held they will be nothing more than a military plebiscite."

Think of that coming from the lips of Carranza's secretary of the treasury, and the man who is probably responsible for the Carranza message of defiance to America, and for the demagogic pleadings for the "idealisms" of "Mexican sovereignty" and other meaningless Spanish rhetoric.

Conditions Worse Than Ever.

Conditions in Mexico—in direct dispute of Carranza's message—are worse today than they ever were. They are bringing a sure decay to every vestige of hope even that Mexico has heretofore maintained. A great and wealthy empire is crumbling, while the great bulk of her people are chained down by serfdom and the others are living by licensed and unlicensed brigandage. Do the Mexican people need education and Christian religion to straighten them out? Yes, but as auxiliary factors only. First of all, they need to be taught to have a decent respect for their neighbor, and then that neighbor will divide the good things of life with them.

Absolutely the first duty of the United States is to force the Mexican people to properly respect the Stars and Stripes. The next duty is to exercise an advisory help in having them establish a real republican form of government, of and for themselves, and to assist them in protecting that government against revolutionists and upstart banditry until the federal forces could do the job alone.

When this is done, Americans by the tens of thousands will flock into Mexico and develop her wonderful resources, employ her labor, build roads and cities, and become assimilated with Mexican fervor and enthusiasm. But now it's "No Man's Land," covered by a tangled mass of outlaws, intrigue, penalty extremes and sky-line licenses. God pity it! A half-starved peon will be shot perchance for stealing a loaf of bread, while a Carranza buck private may rustle a herd of steers on the north side of the Rio Grande and get a "colonelcy" as a reward. That is Mexico today.

DRY AGENTS DRANK WHISKY OF VICTIMS

bile in which Hudson and Shackelford were riding, were introduced in an effort to show that the officers fired first and that the shots came from the right side of the car on which, it was testified, Hall was standing.

H. B. Garber, a garage owner, testified that the bullet holes in the curtains of the automobile occupied by the slain men had been caused by shots from without. He said he had noticed smoke around some of these perforations, indicating that shots had been fired at close range.

The prosecution in an effort to show that all of the bullets fired were from the outside of the automobile occupied by Hudson and Shackelford, placed Holmes Irwin, county coroner, on the stand, who testified the isinglass on the side curtains of the machine showed several punctures with the edges pointing inward and that two of the holes were smoke-marked, indicating the firing had been at close range.

Auto Ordered to Court.

As a result of the argument between counsel for the prosecution and the defense, the court ordered the automobile brought from Woodstock to Manassas, a distance of 80 miles, for evidence.

H. C. A. Funk, undertaker, who cared for the body of Shackelford, testified he had found in the man's pocket a small automatic revolver with six bullets, not discharged, in the magazine, and nine others loose. He said he also found a receipt for $690 for twenty cases of whisky in the pocket.

The prosecution is expected to rest tomorrow.

The point invlved, Commonwealth's Attorney Williams announced in his opening address, is not the guilt for the killing of Hudson, but the "legality" or "illegality" of the killing. The verdict is expected to have an important bearing on the enforcement of the dry law in Virginia and J. Sidney Peters, prohibition commissioner, is attending the trial.

A change of venue was granted because of intense feeling around Winchester, where the shooting occurred, when it became necessary to call out state troops. There has been no indications of lawlessness here during the trial.

MUNICIPAL JUDGES GET SALARY RAISE

Thomas, draws a salary of $4,200 a year. This will be raised to $4,800 per year effective immediately. The associate judges are at present paid $3,600, while the increase will give them a salary of $4,200 a year.

Following the action of the commission, John Y. Smith, prominent Atlanta lawyer and representative from Fulton in the legislature of 1919, announced that the bill providing that the commission should regulate and fix salaries of municipal court judges, was not passed while he was a member of the legislature.

"The raise granted these judges is an unspeakable outrage," stated Mr. Smith, "and is a wanton waste of the tax payers' money." The superior court judges are only paid a salary of $4,000 yearly by the state and Fulton supplements the salary with $1,000 additional per year."

"Judges who are worth a salary of $4,000 a year ought to be elected by the people, and it was only during the past session of the legislature that a number of the most prominent attorneys of Atlanta drew up a bill providing that the municipal court judges be elected by the people instead of being appointed by the superior court judges. In all probability this bill will be passed next year."

"Three judges can easily handle the business of the municipal court if they stay on the job, and it is an outrage to have five judges in that court at such salaries. It was only a year ago that their salaries were raised $50 a month, and if they keep on getting fifty dollar a month raises, the commission will have to raise the tax rate and borrow more money than it has already borrowed to pay these judges' salaries."

$100,000 Road Bonds Of Jackson County Go to Harmony Mills

Jefferson, Ga., September 3.—(Special.)—The county commissioners of Jackson county sold the $100,000 issue of road building bonds to the Harmony Grove mills of Commerce, this county, at a premium of $1,160 and accrued interest to date of delivery. Other bidders were: Jefferson Banking company, R. N. Berrien, Jr. & Co., and J. H. Hilsman & Co., of Atlanta. C. J. Hood, who acted for the purchasers of the bonds, stated that the cotton mills were buying the bonds with their own accumulated funds for investment.

BURNS PROVE FATAL TO LAMBERT, GA., BOY

Savannah, Ga., September 3.—(Special.)—Reed Herbert, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Herbert, of Lambert, Ga., died here at a hospital last night following fearful burns which the baby received when the pallet on which it was sleeping at home caught fire. Rags were being burned in a pan on the floor to drive away mosquitoes, and in some way the pallet caught fire and the child was burned badly from the hips down.

FELDER'S CANDY SUIT POSTPONED IN MACON

Macon, Ga., September 3.—(Special.)—At the request of Thomas S. Felder, former attorney general of Georgia, the suit brought by Mr. Felder against the Hotel Dempsey to recover $2, representing the value of a box of candy, which he claims to have sent to the hotel to be delivered to a young woman friend, and which he claims was not delivered to the young woman, has been postponed until the next term of the municipal court. The suit has attracted a great deal of attention because of the prominence of the parties and the small amount involved.

Mr. Felder says he doesn't care so much about the money as the principle involved. He claims he purchased the candy asa gift for one of the Georgia Normal and Industrial college girls, and after he learned she did not receive it, he could get no satisfaction out of the hotel management as to what became of it.

"UNLOADED GUN" CAUSE OF YOUTH'S DEATH WEDNESDAY

Hayes Station, Ga., September 3.—(Special.)—James Foster Mayfield, 17 years old, was almost instantly killed this afternoon when he was struck in the left temple by a bullet from a .22-caliber parlor rifle in the hands of Eugene Young, another young boy of this place.

According to reports of the tragedy, young Mayfield was just leaving his home at 20 Arizona avenue, to deliver some papers, when he met Young and Otis Covington, another boy. The former is said to have pointed a parlor rifle at Mayfield and pulled the trigger, not knowing that the gun was loaded.

Members of the dead boy's family saw the shooting from the windows. Mayfield fell to the street and did not speak before dying. He was removed to the house, but death came in a very short time.

Sheriff McCurdy, of DeKalb county, took Young into custody and carried him to the jail at Decatur. After an investigation of the tragedy, he was released and allowed to go home with his father without having been locked up.

The slain youth will be buried in the churchyard at Grayson Friday at 11 o'clock. Funeral services will be held at the church there.

(SAYS BOB)

There wasn't any counting of ballots around my place yesterday—but there was a lot of unpacking and checking up of new Clothing and Furnishings, which has just arrived, and which now fills my store.

Months ago I began special preparations to care for my friends and patrons for the fall and winter months. I not only planned a larger and more complete line of goods than I have ever carried before, but I arranged for much larger space.

In my downstairs store, facing Wall street, at the foot of the Whitehall street viaduct steps, I am showing just as complete a line of Fall Suits as I am carrying in my regular Peachtree street store. Down there I also attend to all repairs, alterations, pressing, etc., and my friends who visit the city via the old Union Depot, will find this a most convenient place to drop in, select their suits, and to leave their grips and bundles while they shop for other things over the city. They are invited—and welcome—to do this, whether they buy a penny's worth or not.

This double store arrangement gives me much larger space for carrying goods—but still at a very nominal expense. This makes my overhead expense reasonable, indeed, and, selling for cash, I am enabled to offer
